It Climbs Over 'Almost Anything'

V.B.P.D. Wants All-Terrain Vehicle To Break Up Rowdy Parties; Increase Patrolling

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

An all-terrain vehicle (ATV) can be used in southern Virginia Beach to comb the woods in search of lost hunters or illegal pot fields. At the sandy north end it can track down purse snatchers and lost children. An ATV can even storm sand dunes, flushing out disruptive merry-makers.

And it can also do all of these things in the snow.

These are but a few of the findings the Virginia Beach Police Department reached following a four-day evaluation of a Honda ATV 110, a three-wheeled motorcycle with balloon tires which it borrowed from the Federal Wildlife Refuge in Sandbridge.

Office D. H. Kent puts the ATV through its paces in the sand, and in up to almost a foot of water.

During that testing period, June 28 to July 1, 1983, six arrests were made while the ATV was on patrol, according to Second Precinct Captain Woodrow W. Baker, Jr. Following the testing, which included night patrols, some officers and administrators evaluated the performance of the machine and opted for its purchase. Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles Wall has reviewed the recommendation and will send it this week or next with his blessing to City Manager Thomas Muehlenbeck's office for consideration.

The police department's possible acquisition of an ATV has come about primarily for two reasons.

Other than a three or four year old four-wheel drive vehicle which Baker says is in need of constant repair, police officers have no way of patrolling Virginia Beach's indigenous coastline. Baker's precinct extends from Red Mill Farms on General Booth Boulevard down the coast around to Lynnhaven Inlet, around London Bridge and Oceana and back to Red Mill Farms. Baker divides the beach for which he is responsible into four sections: Croatan, boardwalk, north end, and Fort Story to Lynnhaven. At the north end, Lynnhaven or Croatan for example, if officers have to investigate something on the beach a patrol car must be called, two officers are taken away from their routine patrol and they must walk on foot over the dunes to determine what might be a fire. Whereas with an ATV, an officer could be sent along the beach to the scene to survey the area easier and quicker than a patrol officer.

Another spark kindling the fire to purchase an ATV comes from Westminister-Canterbury, a 400 unit high rise retirement condominium for senior citizens on Shore Drive. It was opened on March 29, 1982.

Dr. Daniel D. Dickerson, executive director at Westminister-Canterbury, said, "we have had for the last couple of summers on weekends, large crowds of mostly young people in front of Westminister-Canterbury. They're noisy, disruptive, set fires, and so on."

Dickerson said sometimes the parties last all night. The young people, sometimes arriving by the bus load, bring portable generators, powerful sound equipment and stereos.

City Council recently acted to prohibit partying on the beach between 6 p.m. and 9 a.m. along a four or five blocks stretch beside Westminister-Canterbury.

"They're (the police) are doing a reasonably good job of enforcing in this area," he said. "But they really need more equipment for the beach. The noise is continuing."

Although not as heavily, the midnight madness continues. There is also littering and what Dickerson describes as "harassment" of the local residents by young people. Dickerson said the Lynnhaven Fishing Pier and the nearby Lynnhaven Colony Civic League joined together in publicly expressing their disapproval. Last summer, he said, local officials met with city officials, including the city manager, Lynnhaven Borough Councilman H. Jack Jennings, Jr., and Chief Wall to discuss the matter.

Jennings said the idea of the police department acquiring an ATV to gain access to inaccessible areas of the beach was a "fine idea and I support it."

He said the Lynnhaven Borough Advisory Council, with which he formed and confers regularly, recently suggested to him that "for the most part it had been resolved." Either way, he added, he hopes the city can find the funds for the vehicle. The city has just begun a new budget year and there aren't funds in the budget for an ATV. Jennings said that if the funds are available, he hoped "we could expedite it rapidly," and added that he thought there were funds in the existing budget available for the purchase.

Chief Wall is reviewing the report on his department's evaluation of the ATV. He said he intends to send his recommendation to Muehlenbeck this week or next.

"I don't have the funds now that I can identify," Wall concedes. But he adds, "I was favorably impressed with the report I saw and I will be forwarding my recommendation to the city manager."

Muehlenbeck said he and civic and city officials had met and "talked informally" about the situation in Lynnhaven, along Chick's Beach. Without committing himself, he said he was hopeful that the funds would be available.

"We have talked informally about how it could possibly enhance our patrolling efforts," he said. "If it will help us protect the ordinances of Virginia Beach we will certainly give it a try."

Paths In The Sand

The Virginia Beach Police Department has a four-wheel drive truck which is usually in need of repair. In addition, it has three Honda 200's which are equipped with a windshield and beacon and used along the boardwalk and resort strip. Discussion about the ATV's began last year.

"The civic group, Westminister-Canterbury and Jack Jennings were concerned about things going on in Lynnhaven beach," Baker said. As discussions continued, the idea of an ATV was proposed. Soon on the heels, an article on the vehicles was published in a national law enforcement magazine. The topic came up again and police officials decided to try to locate one locally for lease or rent to test. They didn't have much success but learned that Fort Story had one. It was out of operation at the time because of an accident resulting from the driver's inexperience, a Fort Story spokesman said. He said the ATV performed well on the beach and with little trouble. The Federal Wildlife Refuge in Sandbridge also has an ATV which it uses to

Sci-Fi Convention At Pavilion

Mimicon I, a science fiction, Star Trek and comic book convention, recently took place at the Pavilion. It was sponsored by Michael Khandelwal, 13, son of Dr. and Mrs. Govind Khandelwal.

Khandelwal said 145 people paid $2 admission to the show, which featured 12 exhibitors. "I've been to other shows and thought it might be fun to have one myself," Khandelwal said. He netted $75.

Immunization Clinics

The Virginia Beach Public Health Department and Virginia Beach Public Schools will hold three separate immunization clinics during August to help ensure that as many students as possible will be in compliance with a new law that went into effect on July 1.

The immunization clinics will be provided free of charge to all school aged children. The immunization clinics will be held at Princess Anne Junior High School on Aug. 10, at First Colonial High School on Aug. 15, and at Kempsville High School on Aug. 16. Hours for all three clinics will be from 8:15 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Virginia law now requires all students to show written proof that they have received immunization against diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough), tetanus, polio, rubella (German measles), and rubella (measles), and mumps.

All students who cannot show proof must include month, day, and year of all shots, including booster shots. Parents of students in school in Virginia Beach prior to the end of the 1982-1983 school year have been notified of any deficiencies or missing information. Anyone enrolling since that time has been told of any deficiencies that must be corrected.

Parents wishing their children to receive any of these free inoculations are requested to bring to the immunization clinics whatever personal immunization records they have in order that the records may be updated after the student receives the shot. Students new to Virginia should obtain a physical examination and immunization certification form from any Virginia Beach public school. The immunization certification form will be completed during the clinic; it should then be taken to the school the student will attend, where it will be made a part of the student's school record. Virginia Beach public schools open for students on Aug. 29.

The new law affects all currently enrolled students as well as new and transfer students.

Great Neck Ball Sign-Up

All students assigned to the new Great Neck Junior High School who want to tryout for the school's football or field hockey teams are encouraged to attend a meeting at the school, 1848 Great Neck Road, on Thursday, August 4 at 7:30 a.m.

Physicals for the boys and girls participation in football and field hockey will be held at the school on Thursday, August 11 at 2 p.m. A $4 fee is charged for the physical.

In The Sand

The Virginia Beach Police Department is slightly excited over the prospect of receiving a three-wheeled all-terrain vehicle.

While it's true it will just be another piece of equipment for police officers to use, it's quite in order for Virginia Beach. An ATV is to the Virginia Beach coastline what a starship is to outer space. They were made for each other, like the saxophone was made for the night, to borrow a line from a song.

The police department has prided itself on being progressive and innovative. Its communications system is second to none and set the trend for many cities to follow. It should not turn away from this chance to significantly increase the number of arrests in the city.

There is a lot of mischief which occurs on the public beaches which never feel the warm breath of the law. It used to be that young lovers would stroll in the north end dunes at night, never once fearing for their safety. This is still the case most of the time. But the muggings, assaults, rapes and murders which occur daily in the streets can certainly happen in the dark on the dunes.

But personal safety for residents and tourists is not the primary purpose the ATV would achieve. Their most crucial role would be played in emergency situations, such as when a child is missing from his or her parents, or for approaching illegal beachfront activities. Calls from assistance from local residents which lead officers out of their cars and into the messy sand would become routine and easy for a fleet of ATVs to handle.

The cost of the ATVs is not sky high and in light of the service they could be to the community and its visitors it would be money well spent. On the other hand, walkie talkies and flashlights are sometimes in short supply at the precincts. Some officers might feel this is a better way to spend the money. Who's right? It's a question Chief Wall will have to figure out when the time comes to actually spend any money.

Boots

It's a pretty interesting situation.

The retired police chief wants his job back after the old city manager fired him. George Hanbury never said that he forced former police chief, W. W. Davis to quit, but that's Davis' contention based on inferences he made about some of Hanbury's comments.

But now Davis the Supreme Court on his side, and apparently is calling for current Chief Charles Wall to be fired and replaced by him.

The city is sticking by the new chief, stating that Davis served at the city manager's discretion and when that undetermined period of time is over, it's over. Age notwithstanding.

It's no secret that Davis still has some friends back at the jail. Neither it is a secret that under Wall the police department has never ever been better. But it's gonna have to take some pretty big boots to kick Wall out of his seat. So far, the boots aren't even out of the box yet.

Robb

By Greg Glassner, editor, The Chesapeake Post

At a meeting last week with a regional group of newspaper editors, Gov. Robb and several of his cabinet members outlined the basic philosophy of their game plan for the 1984-85 fiscal year.

Though everyone is weary of politicians telling them that they have the key to fiscal responsibility, Robb's theories at least bear scrutiny.

The objective is to strengthen the state's commitment to education, develop Virginia's economic future through a marriage of science and technology, increase efficiency throughout state government and do all of this without a general tax increase.

Doesn't something have to suffer as a result of this mathematical equation?

Not necessarily, said Robb. If there is any cutback in essential services, however, at least the load will be borne equitably by many state agencies and the impact will be slight.

The concept employed here is something called "Level Funding." It is an idea that businessmen will not find foreign to them.

In order to squeeze out of present revenue sources the funds necessary for meeting present needs, Robb asked each department head to write down what it was essential to accomplish and what it would be desirable to accomplish in the future.

Each office and department head was then asked what would happen if the particular agency received no additional money beyond that already budgeted.

Through stringent cost-cutting and tight personnel policies already implemented, it is estimated that $50 million will be available to spark new programs or bail out those departments unable to provide minimum essential services at Level Funding.

It was thought that 76 state agencies can operate at or below level funding. The 26 agencies where level funding won't work will receive the supplemental monies.

According to Robb, it boils down to determining what new services are desirable and then deciding which are "most consistent with the state's needs."

Times are tough and getting tougher for state government, he observed. "We have to decide what state governments ought to do and that has not really been done since Harry Byrd Sr."

Indeed! A modern version of old Harry's "pay-as-you-go" policies may be just the ticket for the Commonwealth.

We endorse fiscal responsibility at all levels of government and will watch with interest the progress of Robb's plan to accomplish this vital goal.

Speak Up!

Editor,

Do you believe the Federal Government should collect money in the form of Inheritance Taxes? If your answer is no, then I would like your help to put a stop to this cruel and unjust "death tax" in America.

As Chairman of the Estate and Gift Tax Subcommittee in the United States Senate, I have had the opportunity to learn a good deal about the whole issue of inheritance tax laws throughout the nation.

And I can tell you that I am fully committed to abolishing this tax on the federal and state levels.

That's why I have introduced legislation, which if passed, would end every American of having to pay federal inheritance taxes when a loved one dies.

You see, this isn't the first time I have introduced legislation to abolish the inheritance tax.

In the last few years I have tried to get similar repeal legislation passed through congress...only to be stopped by liberal legislators who feel they have a "right" to your hard-earned money.

If you don't speak up for yourself, the liberals in Congress will do your speaking for you!

The Crafts Revolution

On August 6 and 7 Princess Anne Park will host the annual Virginia Beach Folk Arts Festival. Although this is only the ninth fair to be held in the city, the movement to preserve craft skills is over 150 years old. It began in England with the formation of societies dedicated to providing an alternative to mass production. These societies also hoped to provide a livelihood for craftsmen displaced by the industrial revolution. This led to the formation of firms (most notably by William Morris) to provide these crafts commercially.

Proponents also argued, successfully, that crafts should be given an appropriate place within traditional art exhibitions. Finally, the movement grew to inspire social and political theories and the term Arts and Crafts Movement was coined.

By the end of the nineteenth century the movement spread to the United States where it enjoyed great popularity up to World War II. During the 1970's and 1980's there has been a major revival in interest in folk arts and in the entire Arts and Crafts Movement. The result has been the formation of many folk art fairs such as the upcoming event at Princess Anne Park.

Visitors to the fair might enjoy finding out more about folk arts and the movement which it spawned. The Virginia Beach Public Library has a wealth of material on this subject. Histories of the movement include "Arts and Crafts in Britain and America" by Isabelle Anscombe and Charlotte Gere (Rizzoli, 1978), Lionel Lambourne's "Utopian Craftsmen" (Pergine Smith, 1980), and "The Story of Craft; The Craftsman's Role in Society" by Edward Lucie-Smith. All three books are detailed surveys and include beautiful illustrations.

Martina, Nancy, Hot Water

Martina receives a speeding ticket for zipping through Norfolk. Nancy gets sued for playing basketball in Virginia Beach. All of a sudden Virginia Beach's two best known roommates are in hot water.

Off The Record

By Greg Goldfarb

Well, the water is not really so hot. But the situation is amusing. Nancy and Martina could have lived anywhere in the world. They chose Virginia Beach. Of course Nancy is no stranger to Norfolk and Martina is no stranger to Nancy. So naturally one may expect to see the two of them run around Tidewater as two of the area's biggest celebrities.

Sure, they have both earned titles, honors and distinctions. They both probably have plenty of money. The major thing on their minds is their bodies and their health. They're not worried about speeding tickets and high school gymnasiums.

Speeding is a criminal offense. Martina should know better than to test Norfolk police officers, who are used to verbal abuse from better women than Martina. Martina was clearly at fault, according to the police officer, and she has been touched by Justice.

Nancy's case, however, is not so clear cut. Nancy denies the responsibility for gaining entry to play basketball at a local high school. But because she inquired to the school administration over using the gym, school officials have decided that she is the person to sue for the $171.99 which is apparently the cost of using the gym for a couple of hours.

According to a spokesman, Nancy was sued because she's the person whom the school board felt it should sue. In a news report, there were no other names mentioned about the incident, although one may safely guess that if the gym was opened by someone for playing basketball, certainly there were at least six to 10 people present.

What about the person who let the hoops-sters in without checking to see whether or not the gym space had been rented during that particular time. Might that person not share in some of the responsibility of the alleged illegal game.

Nancy, Virginia Beach is not a bad place. It's really not. City officials and school board members and administrators have a lot of responsibility and do a good job. It is that zeal which has caused the school board to seek compensation for the utilization of its facilities. The school board doesn't make a habit of suing a former basketball star for using the gym, but of course maybe they just never

Art At Libraries

The Library also owns many books which help to define exactly what is folk art. The most comprehensive is probably "The Encyclopedia of Crafts," a three volume set which provides detailed descriptions of 12,000 skills, procedures and tools, plus historical background. Less daunting and much more beautiful to look at is "Folk Art, Art of the Americas" (Abrahms, 1981) which describes and illustrates folk arts from North and South America. Finally, on a more whimsical note is Fred and Mary Fried's "America's Forgotten Folk Arts" which broadens the term to include banner painting and scarecrows and tattoos.

The Virginia Beach Public Library is the perfect place to begin learning about folk arts. Who knows, you might even become inspired to learn a craft. Even their library can help - but that's another article.

All Terrain Vehicles

patrol its beaches, and agreed to loan it to the police department for four days.

In addition to duty duties, the Honda ATV 110 was also used at night up until 11 p.m. A police officer with motorcycle riding experience was selected to put it to the test.

"Overall it was considered to be an extremely superior, a versatile piece of equipment," Baker said. "It was very good in sand. I mean, that thing surprised us. It will climb over almost anything."

The ATV will go over most terrains and will travel through up to eight or nine inches of water.

While the smaller 110 model was being tested (Baker said if the department gets one, it will purchase a considerably larger model one which can be made street legal) six arrests were made.

At Croatan, three surfers were about to start a fight with a lifeguard over the surfing and swimming boundaries. Trouble was averted when "the officer pulled up right behind them," Baker said. "They never saw him."

Baker said the ATV "pulled up on two or three people on the beach area smoking marijuana." People were also found sleeping on the beach and some were found drinking in public.

Baker said most Virginia Beach residents don't realize the diverse composition of the Virginia Beach coastline. In Croatan, for example, he said there are parking problems, drinking in public, and also a strong local civic league that is there to help the police and preserve the community. With the street-legal ATV, the officer can go directly from the beach and dunes onto the streets and parking lots.

Baker said people gather in undeveloped sand lots build fires and have parties, and are not easily accessible by patrol officers in cars.

In the crowded resort strip, the ATV would not be used on the weekends during midday hours.

Baker said the ATV could be taken on the resort beach sparingly during the first of the week, and always in the early mornings, evenings and nights.

At the north end, Baker said there is always parking problems, along with the proper parking of the catamarans. They are supposed to be kept in certain quantities in certain blocks. But they seem to end up in places other than where they're supposed to be.

Baker said the ATV he wants weighs about 341 pounds dry, with a 12 to 14 horse power engine. It would have a head light, signal lights, small windshield, license plate light, a red warning light, and special tires.

Basically, Baker lists these as the major advantages of the acquisition of an ATV:

- Maneuverability - it only needs 48 inches clearance through which to pass.

- Accessibility to inaccessible areas.

- It will travel on dirt, snow, hard roads and sand.

- There are several other ATV's in the Lynnhaven area, and police officers have a hard time catching them. Motorcycles are also taken illegally on the beach.

- The department's four-wheel drive truck, built in '78 or '79, is usually broken down and is expected to be replaced in the next budget.

Baker said these were the disadvantages of the ATV:

- It is not enclosed, so in inclement weather the rider would have to seek shelter.

- It can only carry one "cooperative" passenger.

- If the ATV was at the extreme north end of the beach and made a physical arrest, the ATV would have to be secured while other officers and a patrol car came to assist.

- If one is acquired, the department would seek a garage at Fort Story or at the Ocean Park Fire Station to keep it.

- A trailer would have to be bought to transport it.

Baker said the ATV could be used in rural Virginia Beach to locate lost children in a swamp, park or field. He said it could also locate stills, marijuana fields and lost hunters.

Ideally, Baker said he would like to have six ATVs but will settle for, and isn't prepared but for one.

"It's an innovative new piece of equipment but it is not the answer," Baker said. "It's the man in the street. It can only help him do his job."

Baker would like to see the new ATV in-house by December. He would have to formulate rules, regulations and procedures to accompany its arrival at the police department. He would set up a program for its use, as well as a training program for riders.

The city's budget period runs from July 1 to July 1. Funds for an ATV are not provided for in this budget, but the city manager may take funds out of a "contingency" account for special appropriations.

City Considers Litigation

Virginia Beach City council next Monday will consider litigation which would clear the way for the city to use $10,144,431 in 1980 water and sewer bond referendum funds for the development of any feasible water supply. The money is what remains of an allocation of $11,956,784 which was designated for the exploration of deep wells, freshwater wells and desalting as sources of water supply. The city has since virtually given up pursuing these sources in favor of establishing Lake Gaston as its water source.

supply projects as may be determined by the City Council other than deep wells, freshwater wells and desalting, according to the committee.

The money is part of a $46 million water and sewer bond referendum approved on Nov. 4, 1980. The city's bond council, Chewing said, that unless the city did this, its future use of the money in ways not indicated in the original bond literature, might be a source of contention.

The specific projects for which the money was designated were a 2MGD desalting plant, fresh groundwater test development program, freshwater production well field, freshwater treatment plants, blackish water test and development program, and Pembroke water treatment plant improvements.

Oberndorf Attending Cities Meeting

Virginia Beach City Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf is attending the National League of Cities Steering Committee meeting on energy, environment and natural resources in Alaska.

Oberndorf will pick up the tab herself. She told Council members Monday afternoon that no public money will be spent on the trip. The meeting is scheduled from Aug. 2-8.

The itinerary includes a tour of the facilities at Prudhoe Bay encompassing visits to the oil fields, the base camp, the Arctic Ocean pier for unloading, the annual sea lift, the first pump station on the pipeline, a visit to the Alyeska Pipeline Terminal and three days of meetings at Valdez, Alaska.

The Steering Committee on Energy, Environment and Natural Resources considers such issues as the deregulation of gas prices, water quality, the Federal "take or pay" policy, disposal of toxic waste, the nuclear freeze, acid rain, etc. The position of the Steering Committee will be considered during the National League of Cities annual meeting in New Orleans in November.

A.J. Chewing III, chairman of the Bond Information Committee Monday afternoon at an informal session of Council relayed a recommendation of the Committee to file bond validation proceedings would permit the city to spend the remaining money on "any feasible water supply source."

Next Monday's action will determine whether the city attorney will file the proceedings provided for under the Public Finance Act of the Code of Virginia. At the conclusion of the proceedings, the city should ask the Court to enter a decree requesting that all proceedings taken in connection with the authorization of the bonds are valid and that these bonds may be used to finance water

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Hair, Removing Static Electricity - If you can't get your hair to sit down long enough to spray it, take a fabric softener sheet and rub it on your hair. It works like a charm.

Hair Conditioner, Substitution - Apply one-half cup of mayonnaise to your dry, unwashed hair. Massage well with the ends of the fingers for five minutes, then cover your hair with a large plastic bag for fifteen to twenty minutes. The bag can be held to the head with a rubber band. Shampoo your hair in the usual way.

Hair Shampoo, Making Your Own - Mix four ounces of soft soap from the drugstore with twelve ounces of distilled water. Bring slowly to a boil, then remove from heat and let it cool. As it cools, stir in a few drops of your favorite perfume or after-shave.

OF THE GREATER HAMPTON ROADS

By J. ROBERT PERSONNE, JR.

Promenade with Marinades

Marinades add flavor and also tenderize those tougher cuts of meat and poultry. Here are some of my favorites that I'm sure you will like to try.

Red Wine Marinade

1 cup - oil, vegetable
2 cups - red wine
¼ cup - carrots, chopped few - peppercorns
¼ cup - onions, chopped
Herb bouquet of bay leaf, parsley and thyme
Use as a marinade for game, rabbit and less tender cuts of beef and lamb.

White Wine Marinade is used for poultry, gamebirds, and veal. In making the marinade use 1 cup - vegetable oil, 2 cups - white wine, ¼ cup - chopped carrots, a few peppercorns, ¼ cup - chopped onions and a herb bouquet (bayleaf, parsley and marjoram).

Soy Sauce Marinade

1 cup - soy sauce
1 cup - Sake or Dry Sherry
½ cup - vegetable oil
1 tsp. - garlic, chopped
1 tsp. - ginger, grated
- The Soy Sauce Marinade is great for poultry, shell fish, pork, veal, and beef.

In highlighting your traditional picnic out, you might want to treat your meat and poultry to some down home, good tasting barbecue marinade and basting for the tasting. Combine in a small sauce pan the following: 8 oz. can - tomato sauce, ½ cup - red wine, 1 teaspoon - dry mustard, 1 teaspoon - sugar, 1 teaspoon - salt, 1 tablespoon - vinegar, 1 tablespoon - Worcestershire sauce, 1 grated - garlic clove, and a little tobacco sauce to taste. Simmer for ten minutes, then strain. Add ½ cup of vegetable oil.

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

July 17, 1979.

I've noticed a certain phenomenon over the past few summers and I'm sure it's one that a psychiatrist could have some fun with. But for me it's just an annoyance.

That is that the temperature and the relative humidity of summer weather have a direct and definite effect on my feelings toward the necktie.

In the winter when a necktie is no more than a useless vanity, I dislike neckties; but I do not actively hate them.

But in the summer when the necktie becomes the most efficient heat and moisture retainer known to man, my dislike turns to cold and calculating hatred.

I do, however, continue to wear neckties - and for a good and valid reason.

My boss, you see, loves neckties. In his opinion, they look especially nice on working anchormen.

Non-working anchormen may wear anything they like.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

Tom Jones will perform in concert at Busch Gardens' Royal Palace Theatre on Friday, August 5 at 7:00 and 10:00 p.m.

Tom Jones Concert At Busch Gardens

With accumulated worldwide sales of more than 50 million records, Tom Jones virtually defines the word "superstar," with a string of gold records including "It's Not Unusual," "Green, Green Grass of Home," "She's A Lady," "Delilah," "What's New Pussycat" and "Love Me Tonight." His 200-plus live shows per year are regular sellouts, and he has set attendance records at major venues around the world. His awards include being voted Number One Vocalist in a U.S. Disc Jockey's poll, winning the Entertainer of the Year award from the American Friar's Club, named "Showbiz Personality of the Year" by the Variety Club of Great Britain, and being elected "Show Business Father of the Year" by the National Father's Day Foundation. Jones is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records for the largest contract ever signed by one individual in Great Britain for his popular TV special "This Is Tom Jones." In the area of country music, Jones earned Top 20 recognition with "Darlin'," and Top 30 status with "Lady Lay Down" and "What In The World's Come Over You."

Tom Jones will be appearing at Busch Gardens, The Old Country August 5, at 7:00 and 10:00 p.m. Reserved tickets are $3.50 and $4.00.

Swimmer's Ear

By RICHARD W. ALBERT, M.D.

Swimmer's ear is also known as external otitis.

When children are swimming this summer, some of them may end up with ear infections and they might end up with pain in the outer ear. The symptoms can be severe pain, redness, tenderness, swelling in the ear canal, and also in the outer ear itself. If one pulls on the outer ear it is tender. This type of infection can occur suddenly. A child can be healthy one day, and then suddenly severe ear pain develops the next day. Usually this occurs after a child has been swimming in a pool or even in the ocean. It is felt that this swimmer's ear is caused by germs that may be present in a pool or in the water itself.

In the mild stage of the acute external otitis, there is mild to moderate pain that is aggravated by moving the auricle or the earlobe. Sometimes the patient may have a low fever and sometimes they may have fluid discharging from the ear itself. The fluid may be sticky and yellow. If the ear canal itself is severely swollen, there may be a partial loss of hearing and a feeling of a blocked ear.

This infection can progress to become very severe and when this happens, there is intense pain, the whole side of the head will ache and throb. It will be very difficult for a physician to examine the ear. Often, the whole earlobe itself is swollen and tender to touch. A sticky yellow discharge that may be filled with pus may drain out from the ear canal. Many times the patient has a temperature as high as 104 degrees. If the earlobe is moved at all, there is a pain because this pain is transmitted to the swollen ear canal.

The things that must be considered with a swimmer's ear are that this is an infection that many times can spread to the surrounding scalp and bone and can cause further infection.

The treatment of this ear infection varies. Usually some type of analgesic will suffice. Many times aspirin or an aspirin substitute will be sufficient to relieve the pain. Heat by a heat lamp or heating pad may also help to relieve the pain. Antibiotic ear drops are helpful. If the pain is very severe, then stronger analgesics may be required. If this does not resolve with heat and with ear drops, then one may have to seek further assistance. Usually your family physician can solve this problem with a matter of days. If the infection persists, one may have to seek the aid of a specialist.

If any of the readers have questions about any medical problems, please submit these questions to Dr. Richard Albert in care of the Chesapeake Post, P.O. Box 1327, Chesapeake, Virginia 23320.

High Yield And Safety

Money market funds have attracted an increasing number of savings dollars over the last two years. An investor should decide if he or she plans to use this type of account for an extended period of time. If the individual is using the fund as a savings account for a medium to long term period there are other conservative investments which will give the individual a better return. For example, the current return on money market funds is approximately 8.75%. The recent rise in interest rates has given the money market fund investor a chance to lock in higher rates.

A government agency, The Federal Farm Credit, has just issued a nine-month investment with a return of 10.10%. This requires a minimum investment of $5,000. This investment is offered monthly in denominations of $5,000. There is a six and nine month alternative each month. For the investor looking for maximum income with safety, this investment makes more sense than a money market fund over the next nine months.

R.G. Moore Donates House

A ground-breaking ceremony will be held at 10 a.m., Aug. 3, to celebrate an unusual donation to the Eastern Virginia Medical School from a Virginia Beach land developer.

In an effort to encourage area-wide support of EVMS, R. G. Moore, owner of R. G. Moore Building Corp., has pledged a parcel of land in Wesleyan Pines and profits from a single family house that he will build on the lot. The total gift will be at least $50,000.

In addition, Moore says he is working to encourage other Tidewater builders to make similar pledges.

The property on which immediate construction will begin is lot 23, block A, section 2 of Wesleyan Pines in Virginia Beach. If the house has not sold by Oct. 1, Moore said he will write a check for $50,000 for the medical school. If profits exceed that amount, the builder said he would write a second check for the remainder.

This is not Moore's first donation to EVMS. Several years ago the builder donated $30,000.

Financial Security, Financial Goals

Herbert L. Perlman, President of Perlman Financial Services, an insurance and tax consulting firm, will be featured in a weekly column. Perlman, a life long resident of the Tidewater area, has his MBA from Old Dominion University. He is a Life Member of the Million Dollar Table, the Norfolk Life Underwriters Association, the Society of Chartered Life Underwriters and the National Association of Life Underwriters.

Some doom and gloom followers will tell you that the free enterprise system is dead and that we are becoming a nation of socialize consumers of government provided benefits from cradle to grave. There will be some that will give the explanation that they were not born into the right social or economic environment that would lend itself to financial security. And there are always those that are willing to blame other people for their misfortune.

True, there may be a hint of credence to some of these explanations as to why so many people fail, but for my part, they miss the target entirely. People don't plan to fail, they fail to plan.

How can you achieve financial security if you have no goals, no road map, no guidelines to help you accumulate, over a period of time, wealth (that is, assets and income that is generated from these assets held by the individual). You would no more go from the east coast of the United States to the west coast without making proper preparations and without having a road map outlining the routes in which you would take to get to your destination. Yet, we go through life after entering the work force say at age 25 or before, work forty or more hard years, and have no more idea of where we are going financially than a man in the moon. Oh sure, someone along the way we may get a hot stock tip, a friend gives us an idea or two on real estate, or the like. But basically we do not have a definite plan or set of goals to guide us to financial independence. In addition to a lack of plan, other road blocks to financial independence are lack of discipline, spend rather than save (no delayed gratification), bad investments, inflation, current tax laws, and disability.

For my inaugural column, I would like to share with you what I call "The Facts of Life"; hopefully to awaken your interest and to offer some insight as to why so many people in the United States fail in their efforts to provide financial security for themselves and their loved ones.

According to a 1980 study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, for every 100 people starting their careers, the following situations exist at age 65: 29 are dead, 13 have annual incomes over $3,500 (below poverty level), 55 have annual incomes between $3,500 and $20,000 (median income for this group is $4,700) and 3 have annual incomes over $20,000. According to another study made by the Social Security Administration, 85 out of 100 people reaching age 65 do not have even a measly $250.

How is it that so many people, in the wealthiest nation the world has ever known, where our definition of poor is 800% higher than the average income for the world, can not achieve financial security after 40 years or more of hard work.

If you talk to any one of these people, they would tell you how excited they were about life and their future prospect toward financial rewards; yet 97 out 100 failed miserably. Why?

In the following weeks we will look at various ways to help you plan your financial goals, different investment vehicles to be used, and tax angles pertaining to the accumulation of these assets as well as the preservation of these assets once they have been accumulated.

Debit Card Fraud

If your bank has issued you a special money card that authorizes cash withdrawals from a machine, beware of fraud, warns the Better Business Bureau.

More than 30 million such debit cards are now in circulation. The card instantly debits your bank account with the charge. If someone steals your card or knows the personal identification number (pin), your bank account could be wiped out faster than you can learn of the loss and report it to the bank.

Most banks give a 2-day reporting period with a wipe-out penalty that doesn't exceed $50. However, after the 2-day period, you could be charged up to $500 of the total loss. If you don't tell the bank in a 60-day period after the account statement has been mailed to you, you may pay for the entire loss plus and loans (line of credit) the card authorizes.

The thief may not need the card to make a withdrawal. Your personal identification number may be enough. This number or code word signals the computer that it's okay to give the code bearer the cash.

The BBB offers these suggestions to protect your account at the bank:

- Never give your code number to anyone. Some thieves have been known to phone victims for the code claiming to be a bank official or security person checking on the card. Once you give out the code, the thief can clean out the account in seconds since the thief may be using a telephone in or near the bank.

- Keep a constant check on your account. Open the monthly statement just as soon as it arrives in the mail. Check all withdrawals immediately.
- Don't write your code number or name on the card.

- Be aware of persons standing directly in back or at the side of you as you punch in the code numbers or name. A thief with a good memory can make another withdrawal from your account right after you use the machine.

Huge Deficits A Threat To Help For Homeowners

By ROGER PYLE

Uncle Sam's traditional role of helping American families buy homes may have to be drastically curtailed if the Reagan Administration hopes to slash budget deficits. "Federal lending is growing faster than federal spending, and sooner or later, Congress will have to take a hard look at government credit programs - including those that assist housing," said Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark.

"Over the past four years government lending has exploded, and these expanded programs create pressure to expand federal debt," Bethune said.

However, Democratic Congressmen told builders at a recent convention in Houston that passage of a comprehensive housing bill is their only hope for national rejuvenation of the home construction business in 1983.

Sen. Christopher J.

Dodd, D-Conn., told builders the following legislative stimuli are needed to fuel a housing recovery in 1983:

- Re-establishment of the FHA as the leader and innovator for mortgage credit needs of low and moderate income families.

- Revival of Section 235, a home ownership program that provides mortgage subsidies for low-income families.
- Renewal of the tax-exempt mortgage revenue bond program, which is slated to end in 1983.

- Meet the "desperate" housing needs of lower income families and senior citizens by increased funding.

- Enact new legislation to provide for rehabilitation and new construction of modest rental housing.

- Remove unnecessary constraints on pension fund investment in residential mortgages.

Custom Homes, A Cut Above

Home ownership should be within everyone's grasp, a home for all budgets if you will. I am a firm believer in this cornerstone of the American dream, which if carried further leads to the fact that the larger home evolves from the starter home and the custom home evolves from this larger home. If you're ready for a custom home, D.W. Bell is ready for you.

Bell has been building custom homes locally for 10 years and has built over 250 homes in such areas as Sea Breeze Farm, Middle Plantation, Bellamy Manor, Plantation Hills, and Bay Island.

All Bell homes are built on over size choice lots in the more prestigious sections of Tidewater and many are situated on one acre lots.

Bell recently purchased the last available land (twelve lots) in Thoroughgood, an established community of great stability off Independence Blvd. and Pleasure House Road. Bell will sell or build on eight lots, the remaining were sold to Jim Dodd, a Virginia Beach custom builder.

Three one acre lots are now being cleared in Wit-chuck Farm, next to Bayside Hospital, for two story brick custom homes. Bell bought ten lots in this area.

All Bell homes are built for luxurious, spacious living. As you approach a Bell home, you begin to sense the intentions of the builder. You realize that a home should be more than just shelter distinguished from your neighbors by only the number on the box or the color of the siding. You realize that quality shows, even from a distance.

As you enter the foyer, you notice the attention paid to detail on the staircase, the extensive use of crown molding and chair rail, the finest carpets, beautiful hardwood floors, heavy wood doors and wood frame windows, large inviting rooms and elegant fixtures.

But these homes employ a very functional design with comfortable living being a prime consideration. The kitchen is larger, sunny and equipped with the finest appliances. The dining room has more than enough room for china cabinets, hutches, etc. and could accommodate all but the largest dinner parties.

The bedrooms are roomy, each with its own elegantly appointed bath and closet space everywhere.

However, size alone does not mean quality.

Dennis Bell, President and owner of D.W. Bell, Inc. is not an arm chair builder. He personally inspects all phases of each of his homes to insure the upmost quality in workmanship possible. "We hire the best workers to build the best homes in the resale neighborhoods. The resale value of a home is very important to its owner, so we carefully select our areas according to proposed, as well as existing school zones, stability of the neighborhood and location to desirable work areas such as hospitals or corporate centers," said Dennis Bell.

Walking through several of these homes reminded me how good the "good life" could and should be. Bell currently is active in Seabreeze Farm, Plantation Hills, Wit-chuck Farm, and waterfront properties in Trant Berkshire and Bay Island that are available. For further information and your convenience, a 24 hour phone number is available. 460-4773.

Neptune Ball Set For Pavilion

The Tenth Annual Neptune Festival Presentation and Ball is scheduled for Saturday evening, Sept. 17, at the Pavilion Theatre.

The presentation will be the formal introduction of King Neptune the Tenth and his Royal Court. Always an exciting spectacle of pageantry and entertainment, this year's event will be no exception.

The theme is "King Neptune Remembers When" in observance of the very important tenth anniversary of the Festival and the twentieth anniversary of the City of Virginia Beach. It promises to be a nostalgic potpourri of visual splendor and excitement.

The presentation will begin at 8:15 p.m. and will be followed by the Grand Ball in Pavilion Halls A and B beginning at 9:30 p.m. The music and decorations will, once again, recall an earlier time of quiet elegance coupled with a generous amount of sprightly frivolity.

Tickets for the Presentation and Ball are $50 per couple. Full tables of eight are available at $180--or $45 per couple.

Arts Center Exhibit

"Seven III, Plus One" Running

By DAN GOLDBLATT
Special To The Sun

The seven award of excellence winners and the recipient of the mayor's trophy from the Virginia Beach Arts Center Members' Show held last March will be featured in the "Seven III, Plus One" exhibit which runs through August 18 at the Arts Center gallery at 1711 Arctic Avenue.

The participating artists are exhibiting work in seven different media categories including watercolor and oil painting, porcelain pottery, sculpture, drawing, photography and hand cast paper.

Included in the group are Vornie Whitworth-winner of the mayor's trophy, Karen Chalkley, Lance Chandler, Caroline Newbill, Patricia Renn and Art Bowman of Virginia Beach along with Ruth Scarlott of Norfolk and Skippy Anderson of Highland Springs.

"The show gives us the opportunity to recognize a few of the many outstanding artists from our membership," said Frederick Schmidt, Arts Center director.

"One of the concepts of the Members' Show is to stimulate artists who belong to the Arts Center to create new artwork during the course of the year by providing them with the motivation of exhibiting their work in an exclusive show. I suppose the "Seven III, Plus One" show can be considered an extension of that motivation," said Schmidt.

The exhibiting artists in the "Seven III, Plus One" exhibit were selected in March by a single juror, Tom DeSmidt, associate dean with the school of Art at Virginia's Commonwealth University in Richmond, in the largest annual Members' Show

Occupancy Rates Up; Distance From Ocean No Problem; Tourist Industry Needs Attention

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

He works many hours because he has much responsibility: talking to the guests, monitoring the tourist industry, overseeing 210 full-time employees and also keeping profitable the recently opened $23 million Pavilion Tower.

"I just don't think it's possible to do a good job and run a good operation if you're only working 40 hours a week," said David T. Mollendor, general manager, Pavilion Tower. The 300-room hotel was designed and built to serve as a satellite headquarters hotel for the nearby Pavilion convention center. A second tower of 300 rooms is expected later.

Pavilion Tower, located at 19th Street near Birdneck Road, is managed by Dunfee Hotels Corporation, which is comprised of 28 hotels operating in the United States, London and Paris. The corporation is a subsidiary of Aer Lingus (Irish Airlines) which is itself wholly owned by the Irish Government.

The hotel is owned by several investors, including PEFEDCO, an Oregon banking company, and E.S. Garcia and Associates, Virginia Beach, which serves as the managing participants. Mollendor has worked for Dunfee for four years and before that for five years for Hyatt Hotels, Chicago. He was dispatched to Virginia Beach late last spring after serving two years as manager of the Whitehall, a Dunfee "Classic" hotel in Houston, Tx. Before moving to the Lago Mar section of the city with his wife and child, Mollendor lived in many cities, including Denver, San Francisco, Memphis, Lake Tahoe, Chicago, Indianapolis, New Orleans and Houston.

"We're so narrow in the personality of Virginia Beach...groups aren't going to come here simply because we have a nice hotel and a nice convention center. They look for other activities to be able to offer their attendees as well."—David T. Mollendor, general manager, Pavilion Tower.

"I agree."—Jerry Ross, vice president, Virginia Beach Tourist Bureau.

The University of Denver honor graduate had never been to Virginia Beach before he assumed his newest job at Pavilion Tower, although he visited here once or twice before beginning his duties.

"When I came here it was strictly a conversation that occurred between myself and a Dunfee corporate official," Mollendor, 36, said.

How It all Fits
Now that the hotel is open and operating, Mollendor has had time to better assess Virginia

David T. Mollendor

Beach and its vitally important tourist industry. Dunfee officials were attracted to Virginia Beach largely because of the Pavilion's need for a satellite hotel. Pavilion officials say they have lost many convention clients because of the absence of such a facility.

"One of the things we all felt was real significant about being here was the fact that we were next to the convention center," Mollendor said.

Has the Pavilion lived up to Mollendor's expectations? "Well, right at this point, no," Mollendor said. "But I want to temper that by saying that up to this point, until the hotel opened, I think it has been very difficult for the convention center." Now that the hotel is open, he expects the convention center will get more business, which will in turn generate more business for the hotel.

Mollendor acknowledges that Pavilion Tower's nearness to the convention center gives it a certain advantage over other Virginia Beach hotels. But the proximity is a result of cooperation, not competition.

"The proximity to the Pavilion is an edge," Mollendor said. "But our relationship with the folks at the convention center is really not an edge. They are willing to work with anybody in the city." Mollendor added, it's "simply natural" that a closer relationship between the convention center and the hotel will develop in the future.

Although most people recognize that the Pavilion Tower, located about six blocks off the beach, was not designed to compete with the oceanfront hotels and motels, critics charge that its distance from the ocean is still a disadvantage. Mollendor doesn't agree.

25-30 False Fire Alarms; System Settling Out

Since the Pavilion Tower opened on May 27, Virginia Beach firefighters say they have been called to the hotel between 25 and 30 times to cut off the hotel's "state-of-the-art life support system." In other words, the fire alarm keeps going off accidentally.

The main cause of trouble seems to be on the east side of the 12th floor, where high temperatures set off the heat and smoke sensitive detectors. In addition, firefighters say the system, which automatically instructs guests in evacuation procedures, can be set off by dust, spiders, or any obstruction in ventilation.

Firefighters say that for the new system to start operating without error may take up to a year. For example, The Russell House, a senior citizens residential complex on First Colonial Road, has a life support system which also erroneously called the fire department many times before all the bugs were worked out. One firefighter said they had answered 135 calls due to the system, while another one said that they answered over 300 calls before the system worked properly.

July Tower Occupancy 70%

There is always a degree of uncertainty over occupancy rates when any new lodging facility first opens. The Pavilion Tower jumped off to a good start when it opened on May 27, right in time for the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

Pavilion General Manager David Mollendor said he is "feeling very good" about the hotel's occupancy rates. Mollendor said the average occupancy rate for July, for example, was at 70%. He expects a strong fall but admits the winter months, December through February, "doesn't look too good." He acknowledges that a drop in business at that time is part of Virginia Beach's nature.

The Pavilion Spark

Virginia Beach has a new hotel: Pavilion Tower. It's been criticized as not being one of the most attractive structures in the city, but of course that observation comes from those who can't find anything else wrong with the hotel.

The magnificent Tower complements perfectly the Pavilion convention center. And from all indications, it's got a real pro at its helm.

David Mollendor has worked all over the United States. He has seen commercial development from all sides. He comes to Virginia Beach with hopes for the best, but is now realizing that it's going to take a little more work than he planned. The work, however, is not on the hotel but on the city's tourist industry.

Mollendor thinks there are not enough family oriented activities offered in the city to keep tourists here more than a day or two. We're losing them to theme parks and other resort cities which are gaining in popularity. Recent studies have also indicated that Virginia Beach must reload both barrels if it expects to take aim at a flourishing tourist business in the future.

After looking around the city and up and down Atlantic Avenue, these observations are probably true. The resort strip for the most part is a series of clothes and gift shops and eating and drinking establishments. It's unlikely any of that is going to change, nor should it. The resort strip businesses have attracted people every summer for years and will continue to do so, especially when considering that the city is going to spend millions of dollars very soon to revamp the outward appearance of the strip. But off the strip where do you go?

The Pavilion convention center offers a myriad of activities which should be of interest to both locals and tourists. There's marinas, a few golf courses, the Farmer's Market and some beautiful parks. But there's really nothing into which tourists can sink their teeth. Mollendor mentions a Sea World. That would be great except during the winter when the outdoor pools of fish would have to be taken indoors in order to allow for ice skating. And even that wouldn't last.

Seriously though, a theme park with aquatic overtones has been discussed in the past and is in order. Why should Virginia Beach lose business to King's Dominion, Williamsburg, and Busch Gardens? Norfolk is even getting in on the act with its Waterside. Certainly Virginia Beach tourists would look for reasons to stay in the city, continue to go to the beach, and extend their visit here if there were more things to do. They don't want to spend their vacation time, gas and money on the road traveling to different cities in order to see different attractions.

David Mollendor should be very good for Virginia Beach. He's new, objective, intelligent, and may be the spark to ignite the flames of the tourist industry's future in Virginia Beach.

Higher Standards

Implementation of the newest high standards of education recommendations in Virginia Beach has begun.

Recently the Virginia Beach School Board voted to begin implementing 37 of the 138 recommendations submitted by a 36-member curriculum assessment and development task force. The task force worked for two years on the recommendations.

Among many other things, new changes will include increasing the number of credits required for graduation from 19 to 22. Students, beginning in the eighth grade, must take a total of five years of math and science instead of two, plus a semester of fine arts.

Of course this educational progress, which is attempting to prepare students for a rapidly changing world, will require additional teacher power and money.

In a broad sense, funding the changes will not be as difficult as acquiring the teachers, another 83 is projected, and making sure the proposed higher levels of education are carried through.

The school's system's administrative structure now has a master educational game plan for the future but it's success will depend on the parents, teachers and students.

Public education in this country has never failed to realize and attempt to perpetuate what needs to be done to insure an academically sound society. However, on a year to year basis, things do not always go as according to planned. Even with the new measures adopted to increase the intellect of students, problems with student and teacher achievement, performance and motivation will not immediately go away. But everybody who sincerely cares about education is working towards that goal.

Winning

Congratulations to Ocean Rescue Service, Inc., the city's veteran lifeguard service which recently won an endurance test over its commercial competitor, Virginia Beach Patrol, Inc., and the city's Parks and Recreation Department's lifeguards.

The contest consisted of a combination one-block run and two-block swim, a two-mile foot race along the boardwalk and a tug of war.

The test was not so much one of performance as it was of pride. Certainly all fit lifeguards can complete the events, or they wouldn't be lifeguards. But because there are three groups of lifeguards in the city, a for-the-record determination had to be made of which group was the best equipped in terms of strengths and endurance, to protect the valuable lives of the millions of swimmers and sunners which visit Virginia Beach.

Guest Columnist - Paul Tribble

The following are excerpts from a column entitled "Paul Tribble Reports From Washington" that Virginia Senator Paul Tribble is writing for the public:

I have a deep concern about the quality and future of education in America. This month I will hold three education hearings to give our state's top educators an opportunity to evaluate the report of the President's Commission on Excellence in Education and consider legislation to help improve American education.

These hearings will focus on all aspects of primary and secondary education, higher education and education in the 21st century—specifically in the high technology field.

Our children represent our country's greatest resource. We must ensure that they will receive the best education America has to offer. We can do nothing less to guarantee our future.

Senate Votes MX Funds

Recently, I joined a substantial majority of my Senate colleagues and voted for the initial deployment of 27 MX missiles. In the last decade the Soviet Union has spent unprecedented sums of money to expand and develop its strategic forces. The United States has stood pat, and today we have 15 year missiles in the ground. We simply have to modernize our forces in order to maintain a credible deterrence.

The vote on the MX was a clear endorsement of a bi-partisan, three-pronged strategy to modernize our strategic forces, move ahead on arms reduction talks, and build a smaller, less de-stabilizing missile to carry a single warhead.

The bi-partisan consensus is a fragile one. It can only be sustained if the Reagan Administration works hard to bring about real arms reductions with the Soviet Union.

Withholding Provision Repealed

The long legislative fight to repeal withholding is finally over. The Senate has passed and sent to the President a bill to repeal this unfair provision. I'm confident the President will sign this bill. It contains improved compliance provisions and it will ensure that more tax dollars are collected. It also contains legislation the President really wants—the Caribbean Basin Initiative.

The battle over withholding was really a people's issue. The question was whether honest, hard-working taxpayers would have to bear an additional tax burden because a small percentage of folks were not paying their taxes. The only fair answer is no.

It's A Classical Pursuit

Generally newspapers don't give a darn, unless they own one, about radio or television stations. But in the interest of culture and good work habits, here's my two cents worth:

If WGH FM drops its classical format, I might as well start selling shoes. I cannot work to music which has lyrics, and elevator music should be banned.

Off The Record

Most of the radio stations on the public airways now sound exactly the same. The music they program sounds like it was written and performed by a band of escaped African pygmies. Lyrics, melody or harmony are no longer important, as they were up until the '50's. Now all that matters is the beat. That's fine for young people, who are mostly the ones listening to the noise. To be honest, however, I subject myself to that torture while driving. It keeps me awake while commuting. But at home I prefer jazz and at the office, classical.

While sitting at the desk, that arcane and dizzying editor's desk, I can't think if there's songs on the air exploring me to do nothing but dance, drink and do drugs. In fact, some of the stuff that comes across in some of the songs ought to be outright illegal to be broadcast over the public airwaves. With as much money and time that is spent at all levels of society to combat social abuses of drinking and drugs, it's dumber than hell to allow such brain-burning songs to reach our children's ears. I mean, what are you supposed to think when the rock 'n roll DJ at 8:30 a.m. yells, "Good morning kids, let's get high and kick a--!" Consequently, kids enter the classrooms with Eric Clapton's "Cocaine" ringing in their heads. No wonder they don't learn.

Classical, while not for everybody, is for me even if not all the time. It's ashamed that in an area that is already criticized by some for what is perceived as a lack of cultural credibility, WGH is considering taking one more step toward that end.

On another note, I have watched the popular "American Bandstand" on Saturday afternoon off and on for years. And for years, because of what always seemed to me to be a west coast flavor of the show, I wanted to think the show was taped in California. Deep down inside I had heard that it does originate from Philly. But why? The people and styles on the show look typically L.A. But the point is, why not broadcast a similar show in Virginia Beach? Let's find a studio, like CBN, fill it full of local kids dancing like Mexican jumping beans and turn the cameras loose.

If we're going to lose the cultural classics, we might as well exploit the crass contemporary.

Pavilion Tower Should Be For The Black After Three Years

"Sure, there are people who, when they come to Virginia Beach want to stay on the beach, period," Mollendor said. "And that's just part of the market that I can't change. But there are those individuals who come to Virginia Beach and utilize the beach but who don't really have a preference as to where they're on the beach or not."

Mollendor suggests that for people to be able to stay in a Dunfee hotel they might have to give up the beach.

"Ultimately, I've always seen tourists, for the most part as we know it right now, as being a kind of a secondary marketing opportunity for us in terms of overflow, but also in terms of there are really small numbers of people who really don't care about being on the beach just as long as it's available to them," Mollendor said.

"Quality is something that speaks for itself," Mollendor continued. "It's something that's hard to market. If they really want quality they might have to give up something for it." Pavilion Tower provides free transportation to and from the ocean for its guests. In addition, on the beach along 10th Street they are provided with guest umbrellas and chairs.

Mollendor understands the importance of the Pavilion's convention business to the overall success of the Pavilion Tower, but he must also rely heavily on business generated by his staff and not the Pavilion. However, his impressions of the city, and its tourist industry have changed since his arrival.

"Sure my impression has changed," he said. "I like the city even more than I thought I would to be honest with you. And it's not because of the city itself, it's because of the personality the city has, and the people who live in the city and make it work."

"But I also feel like Virginia Beach isn't quite as progressive as I thought it would be," Mollendor continued. "I just think the tourist industry, of course you're talking to somebody whose livelihood depends on the tourist industry so there's a little bias, is a very very important facet of the city's economy. We really need to be much more progressive to keep ahead or keep pace with other resort areas such as Ocean City or Myrtle Beach."

Specifically, Mollendor says there are not enough adult and children's activities to keep tourists in Virginia Beach more than a couple of days.

"Certainly the beach is a big draw but how long are you going to be able to keep a child on the beach?" Mollendor asks. "A couple of hours and they're bored."

Mollendor said the local night clubs tend to cater "much younger adults and maybe to some degree to an upper teen audience."

"There are not enough adult activities," Mollendor contends. "We don't have enough children's activities. I think we need a major attraction like Sea World or a real nice theme park" so the beach could attract and retain more married couples.

Mollendor said Virginia Beach's resort business is threatened mostly by Williamsburg, Busch Gardens, The Waterside in Norfolk and other resort beaches such as Myrtle Beach in South Carolina.

"Some of the Canadian market that we've previously enjoyed, we're no longer enjoying," he said, "because Myrtle Beach is a very very nice resort area and they have a very diverse number of things people can do. Plus they have time sharing, for example, with condos."

Part of the reason that Virginia Beach may be slowing down in its tourist business, although the city is planning about a $20 million Atlantic Avenue facelift in the near future, is because of the limited "personality" of Virginia Beach.

"We're so narrow in the personality Virginia Beach has that we're probably going to find that if we don't address many issues that other areas are who are progressing...they're going to start to capture the most business. Groups aren't going to come here simply because we have a nice hotel and a nice convention center. They look for other activities to be able to offer their attendees as well."

Mollendor admits he doesn't have the "magic answer" to how to ensure Virginia Beach's continued successful tourist industry, but said it begins with a "master plan."

"For example, the Tourist Bureau really needs to be a little bit more together than it is," Mollendor said. "And I don't mean that as a negative. It's just that, you know we have to be able to define common objectives that are relevant to everybody rather than looking at specific special interests."

Nick Wright, president of the Virginia Beach Tourist Bureau was out of town and unavailable for comment. Jerry Ross, Tourist Bureau vice president, was reached and said, "I agree" generally with Mollendor's comments.

Caring for the tourist industry is not the direct responsibility of one person or group.

"It's not just a function, developing the city, that strictly falls on the shoulders of city council and city management," Mollendor said. "It also requires people who are willing to make investments; people getting together and working out some common objectives that you can really get your arms around." He added, "there are a lot of good ideas floating about."

management, says many resort areas are now experiencing difficulty.

"Right at this time there are many resort areas suffering from the same problems (as Virginia Beach)," Mollendor said. "But of course there's a lag time between when you start discussing problems and when you get them corrected."

Mollendor Likes Virginia Beach

Mary Ann. They have one son, Desmond, 12, attending Princess Anne Junior High School. They live in the Lago Mar section of the city, near the Hell's Point golf course. Mollendor said he and his family have not been to the oceanfront yet, but that they are staying busy getting their new house into shape. In their spare time they like to entertain guests in their home.

Of all the cities in which Mollendor has lived, he likes Virginia as well as any of them. "Out of all the cities I've worked in, this just fits right in with New Orleans and San Francisco in terms of personal likes," he said. "I like Virginia Beach so much that at this point in time I have no aspirations to be anywhere else."

Mollendor's fondness for the city carries through into the operations of the Pavilion Tower.

"The community impact of the hotel is a very key issue," he said. "I feel that in order for us to be an effective social entity within the community, and as a business, I think it's just like an individual - you know, you either have a social consciousness or you don't. To me it's very important to be able to make a positive contribution as a business to the city." The first of King Neptune ceremonies are taking place this week at the Pavilion Tower.

"We sell intangible products for the most part at the Pavilion Tower and what the client goes away with is a memory," Mollendor said.

Marching Cavaliers Resume

The Fabulous Marching Cavaliers of Princess Anne High School will hold its annual band camp resumption on Monday, August 15 at 8 a.m. at the

During the week of August 22-26, rehearsal time is from 5:30-9 p.m. each evening.

The Fabulous Marching Cavaliers will have their first performance on Friday, Sept. 2 at the opening football game.

Fire System Still Settling

Other facilities in the city which incorporate life saving systems similar to what Pavilion Towers literature describes as a "state-of-the-art life support system" includes the F&M building near Pembroke, the new Holiday Inn, near Newtown Road, and Westminster-Canterbury, according to firefighters.

Firefighters say the Pavilion Tower's life support system is linked directly to a private company in Richmond. When an alarm goes off a signal is sent to Richmond which is then in turn sent back to the Virginia Beach Fire Department. Response time, firefighters say, is less than three minutes.

Because of the sophisticated system, fire fighters say the chance of a fire causing serious damage or injury at the Pavilion Tower is "slim and none."

Firefighters say the reason most new buildings are using high technology fire prevention systems is to reduce insurance rates.

Pavilion General Manager David Mollendor said, "the system is just starting to settle down. It's a real delicate complex system."

Pavilion Tower literature says of the system, "A state-of-the-art life support system makes Pavilion Tower one of the safest hotels in the country. This system automatically instructs guests in evacuation procedures, douses the affected area, and enables firefighters to pinpoint the trouble spot and communicate with each other throughout the building. All guest rooms and public areas are equipped with smoke detectors and sprinklers."

Dumpsters Go Back To School

The City of Virginia Beach Public Use Dumpster Program will end, effective August 15. The dumpsters have to be cleaned and relocated for the beginning of the school year.

During the school year the dumpsters are for school use only. Do not place any refuse in these containers after August 15, 1983.

For further information contact solid waste administration at 427-4201.

Controversy Over Jets Didn't Bother Tower

Before the Pavilion Tower opened, there was much controversy over its height which was eventually lopped in half to accommodate the concerns of the nearby master jet base, Naval Air Station, Oceana.

Oceana officials were concerned that the building would be, and still is, posing a hazard to jets because the 12-story building stands fearfully close to one of the flight paths of one of the base's runways.

Pavilion Tower General Manager David Mollendor, however, does not believe the controversy has had any effect on the hotel now that it has opened.

"Progress always creates a little controversy," Mollendor said, "and from my standpoint it's just that. In the end it must have been resolved amicably because the hotel is here. All parties must be satisfied."

Virginia Beach City Council

By Lee Cahill

Meeting Date: Aug. 8, 1983

Planning Workshop, 9 a.m.

Commonwealth's Attorney Paul A. Sciorino explained the changes in the Conflict of Interest Act. Council discussed the landscape ordinance, definitions included in the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance, the Capital Improvement Program process, major right-of-way improvement policies and building in flood plain areas.

Informal Session 12:40 p.m. All members present except Oberdorf.

Meeting Schedule

Council discussed rescheduling Sept. 5 (Labor Day) meeting to Sept. 6, and cancelling Sept. 29 meeting which falls during the annual meeting of the Virginia Municipal League in Williamsburg.

LCAC Committee

Jennings announced a meeting of the LCAC (land craft air cushion) Committee meeting Tuesday at 9 a.m. in the Pavilion Board Room hosted by the Navy.

Panama City

Jennings announced the Navy-sponsored trip to Panama City, Fla., Wednesday to observe the LCAC's. Council members were invited.

Ambassador Program

Economic Development Department Director James DeBellis spoke briefly on the ambassador program which makes available business cards to citizens to promote Virginia Beach. He said arrangements are being made to have an honor roll or other form of recognition to individuals responsible for bringing new business into the city.

Marine Science Museum

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck recommended awarding a contract for the project without first identifying low priority projects which might have to be delayed if the State does not come through with the expected funding next year. He suggested that the city wait until it finds out whether the funds are available before transferring funds from other city projects to the museum project.

Beach Erosion

The U.S. Corps of Engineers will brief Council at 11 a.m. next Monday on its proposed beach erosion program.

Briefings

Starting in October, Council will reserve the first Monday of the month for briefings, transferring formal agenda items to the remaining three meetings of the month. The change is being made, on the suggestion of Henley, as an experiment in an effort to shorten meeting times which have been increasingly lengthened by briefing sessions. This system was used several years ago on the recommendation of then Mayor Patrick L. Standing.

Consent Agenda

Member's Art

held in the Arts Center's 30-year history with over 200 participating artists and more than 400 works of art.

The show's top award, the mayor's trophy, went to Ronnie Whitworth for her realistic still life watercolor, "Still Life With Eggs." She has been a fashion illustrator with a Norfolk-based department store chain for the past ten years. She attended Old Dominion University and continued her studies at the Fashion Institute of America in Atlanta, Georgia. In 1982, her work was exhibited as part of the Virginia Museum's "Virginia Prints and Drawings" juried show in Richmond. She also won an award of excellence in the 1982 Members' show.

Ruth Scarlott is one of the leading paper object artists in the United States. Ironically, she has never received any formal training. But her works are included in public and private collections throughout Virginia and in private collections in New York, California and Ohio. In 1982, she won best-in-show honors in two area art shows: the Azalea Festival Art Show and the Tidewater Artists Annual Exhibition, both in Norfolk. Scarlott's intriguing hand cast paper works are indicative of the diversity in the show.

The functional slipcase and hand carved porcelain pottery by Karen Chalkley offers another complementary medium to the show. In 1982, her work won best-in-show honors in three Tidewater art shows--the Neptune Festival, Hilltop art shows and the Ghent Arts Festival. Much of her work is done in collaboration with her husband, James. The Chalkleys, both graduates of Virginia Commonwealth University, won the first place ceramics award at the 1983 Ghent Arts Festival in addition to her Members' Show prize.

Lance Chandler, a 1983 Old Dominion University graduate and the youngest winner, shows his creative promise with abstract paintings and sculptures. His early landscape studies depicting a strong sense of light and depth have evolved into more abstract investigations over the past couple of years.

Caroline Newbill's soft pencil drawings have also developed over the past few years. Although she studied art at the University of Georgia in Athens, Newbill worked entirely in commercial art prior to taking a drawing course at Old Dominion University under the late A.B. Jackson's advice in 1980. In 1982, she won an award of excellence in the Arts Center's Members' Show.

Patricia Renn, who specializes in oil portrait painting, seldom exhibits her artwork. Her dramatic renditions are primarily initiated through commissions and are held in private family collections. After graduating with honors from Garland Junior College (Boston, Mass.) with a degree in fashion design and going on to receiving her bachelor of fine arts (magna cum laude) from Old Dominion University, Renn studied portraiture under Glenn Heaton and Ann Diedrich Schuler in Baltimore.

color as a design element and every-day objects as subject matter.

Finally, Skippy Anderson, who is exhibiting transparent watercolor paintings, recently became an artists signature member of the Virginia watercolor Society. An extensive background in commercial work has helped her retain a precise style drawing. Anderson lives in Highland Springs near Richmond and was educated at Richmond Professional Institute. She later studied at the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences School of Art. Her work has been exhibited in juried shows at the Virginia Museum. Her work is included in private collections and often appears in business and civic publications.

"The Seven III, Plus One" exhibit offers artwork indicative of the strides being made by the artistic members of the Virginia Beach Arts Center. Strides that have been quickened by a gentle nudge of creative motivation.

The show is free and open to the public Mondays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Additional information is available at 425-0000.

The tenth edition of one of the most unique leadership training programs in the country has been underway for the past three weeks at Virginia Wesleyan College.

Students from the Virginia Beach Junior and senior high schools assembled for a series of Student Leadership Workshops and other programs including concentrated sessions in drama and debate. Other programs during the three weeks included conferences for Student Activity Advisors and Elementary S.C.A. Advisors and a Sports Medicine Seminar.

According to William S. Peachy, Supervisor of Student Activities for the school system, the Workshop, the first city-wide program of its kind in the country, offered young student leaders concentrated courses in leadership skills, project planning, human relations, publicity, group dynamics, parliamentary procedure, effective meetings, officer duties and responsibilities, and communication skills. There were 93 junior high and 107 senior high school students participating in the workshops.

Coordinating the program were Diane Derrick, Student Activities Assistant for Virginia Beach schools, who has been involved with the workshops since their beginning, and Leon Proffitt, history teacher at Plaza Junior High School. A staff of 22, many former participants who return each year, served as instructors and counselors.

"This program is important," Ms. Derrick says, "because we are not all born leaders. We began a program to help train inexperienced and experienced student officers or other interested students in the art of leadership. The potential for leadership is present in so many students, but often goes untapped because of lack of training, encouragement or experience.

During the three-day Drama Workshop the students put together an abbreviated production of the Broadway show "Cats" which played to an enthusiastic full house in the college's Hofheimer Theater. Mrs. Pat Bernick, a drama teacher at Kempsville High School, was coordinator of the Drama Workshop. Bentley B. Anderson, assistant professor of theater/communications at Virginia Wesleyan, assisted with the technical part of the production.

ACTIVITIES:

TOTAL $410,500

The Jobs Bill objectives are to make a concentrated effort to provide jobs for primarily the unemployed and services to low and moderate income persons. These planned projects are to improve the quality of life and do not require additional environmental review at this time. The legal effect of the "Release of Funds Certification" is that upon its approval by HUD, the City of Virginia Beach may utilize the Jobs Bill Funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is one of the following bases: a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the Chief Executive Officer or other officer of the City approved by HUD; or b) the City's environmental for the projects indicate omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the projects in the environmental review process. Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. Any objections should be sent to Mr. John LeVay, Jr., Director, Community Planning and Development, U.S. Department of HUD, 701 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219. Once the City's request for release of funds has been received by HUD, there will be an additional 15 day period in which HUD will consider any objection to the City's request. A copy of the Jobs Bill Application can be reviewed at the Office of Housing and Community Development, 302-22nd Street, Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Religion and the Family

You'll find in the Sixty-eighth Psalm a remarkable statement: He setteth the solitary in families. The Bible is saying that the family as a social institution was designed by God.

Obviously for a purpose: His purpose! The family has long been the center for sharing and strengthening religious insights and convictions. The effectiveness of the Church in teaching and inspiring souls is generally dependent on the support and encouragement of the home.

But the ancient text says something more! It says God is concerned about those who are alone! He wants them to discover that we are all part of HIS FAMILY. The Church can be instrumental in helping the lonely find life rich in warmth and caring.

Whether next Sabbath you'll be with the family—or alone—God is expecting you!

Closing Date

By ROGER PYLE

Most contracts regarding the sale of real property will generally indicate a proposed closing or settlement date. Usually this proposed closing date will be projected far enough into the future that it will allow adequate time for the proposed purchaser to obtain any commitments and also allow the seller enough time to prepare the required title search and property survey.

This date is chosen by means of negotiations between the buyer to what is convenient for their particular time schedules, and then modified by an educated estimate by the real estate broker, as to how long the mortgage commitment might take to be approved.

Obviously, any number of variable come into play which may well affect the actual date of closing. Mortgage approval may take longer than anticipated or the final inspection may be delayed.

Both parties must bear in mind that the date which is selected as the closing date, and specified as such in the contract, is only a target date. Everyone should try to abide with that date, so that the closing may take place as smoothly as possible. However, there is no way that any date which is estimated approximately two or three months prior to the projected closing can be guaranteed.

If, for whatever reason, either party must predetermine the pre-close date on which their deal will be completed, they should indicate right on the original contract that "time is of the essence" and that the projected closing date must be adhered to. Such a specification will then put all parties, and their respective attorneys, on notice that everything must be completed by the projected date.

Home Resale Pace Slows In June

The pace of the housing recovery slowed considerably in June with existing-home sales activity rising on an annual basis by only one-sixth as much as in the previous month, the National Association of Realtors reported today.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate of home resales increased just 1 percent during June to 2.93 million units, compared with a 6.2 percent increase recorded in May, when the level reached 2.9 million units, the association said.

The actual number of resales in June was 284,000, compared with 259,000 in May, the Association's nationwide survey of local boards of Realtors found.

"Although resale activity is currently 48 percent ahead of this time last year, the sales rate is still well below the 3.5 million-4 million transactions needed annually to accommodate the mobility needs of the nation," Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the association, said.

"The prospects for strong improvement in the coming months appear dim in light of the rising mortgage interest rates and the fact that June's sales increase is significantly less than the increase reported in May," Carlson added.

Over the past 60 days, mortgage interest rates have climbed by more than a full percentage point to around 13.5 percent. "Obviously, this increase is beginning to take its toll on the housing recovery," Carlson said.

Only the West enjoyed continued strong increases in resale activity last month, with a 12 percent May-to-June increase. In the North Central and South regions the increases were only 2.7 percent and 1.8 percent, respectively. The Northeast region, by contrast, suffered a 9.8 percent May-to-June drop in resales.

Carlson said the number of homes for sale nationwide declined to 2.41 million in June -- a 9.8 month supply at the current sales pace. In May, 2.42 million homes were for sale.

In conjunction with the resale volume report, the National Association of Realtors released its June figures on sales prices of existing single-family homes.

Home prices advanced at a faster pace in June than in preceding months, Carlson said. The median sales price of an existing home during June was $72,300 -- a $3,100 increase over May and a 4.2 percent gain over the median price in June one year ago.

"Over the past three years, home prices have not kept up with the overall inflation rate," Carlson noted.

"Prior to 1980, increases in home prices consistently matched or exceeded advances in the consumer price index," he said. "In part, the moderate price performance over the last three years has offset, in part, the price increases that took place in the last half of the 1970's," he added.

"Except for high interest rates, home prices are a better bargain now than four years ago," Carlson said.

Century 21 To Enter Business Brokerage

Century 21 has announced a nationwide program to expand into business brokerage beginning this month. The program will make Century 21 the largest business brokerage network in the country. Foreign investment opportunities will be available through participating Century 21 offices in Canada and Japan.

The business brokerage program will feature a national multiple listing publication of Century 21 business and investment listings and a quarterly marketing journal directed to the homes of thousands of potential investors. Initial training for business brokerage certification for Century 21 agents will be held in Tysons Corner, Virginia, on August 18. Clifford Pohren, Registered Financial Advisor, will be the instructor.

Edward M. Northrop, Director of Corporate Development for Century 21, indicates, "The need for professional assistance for buyers and owners of small to medium-sized businesses is critical. In the past, there has been a vacuum in this area; our program is designed to meet this need in the business community."

In addition to handling the actual sale of the business, Century 21 Certified Business Brokers will offer property management support services and can provide assistance in selling any real property associated with the business. Northrop added, "The sale of a business almost always involves the sale or lease of real property; therefore, we feel that business brokerage can best be handled by a real estate professional."

Century 21 Real Estate Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Trans World Corporation, is North America's largest real estate sales organization, with over 6,000 individually owned, and operated offices nationwide.

(Last week Mr. Perlman's column was inadvertently run out of sequence. The staff apologizes to Mr. Perlman and the reader. Here is his article, once again, in correct order.)

For my inaugural column, I would like to share with you what I call "The Facts of Life": hopefully to awaken your interest and to offer some insight as to why so many people in the United States fail in their efforts to provide financial security for themselves and their loved ones.

According to a 1980 study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, for every 100 people starting their careers, the following situations exist at age 65: 29 are dead, 13 have annual incomes under $3,500 (below poverty level), 55 have annual incomes between $3,500 and $20,000 (median income for this group is $4,700) and 3 have annual incomes over $20,000. According to another study made by the

Financial Security, Financial Goals

Social Security Administration, 85 out of 100 people reaching age 65 do not have even a measly $250.

How is it that so many people, in the wealthiest nation the world has ever known, where our definition of poor is 800% higher than the average income for the world, can not achieve financial security after 40 years or more of hard work?

If you talk to any one of these people, they would tell you how excited they were about life and their future prospect toward financial rewards; yet 97 out of 100 failed miserably. Why?

Some doom and gloom followers will tell you that the free enterprise system is dead and that we are becoming a nation of socialize consumers of government provided benefits from cradle to grave. There will be some that will give the explanation that they were not born into the right social or economic environment that would lend itself to financial security. And there are always those that are willing to blame other people for their misfortune.

True, there may be a hint of credence to some of these explanations as to why so many people fail, but for my part, they miss the target entirely. People don't plan to fail, they fail to plan.

How can you achieve financial security if you have no goals, no road map, no guidelines to help you accumulate, over a period of time, wealth (that is, assets and income that is generated from these assets held by the individual). You would no more go from the east coast of the United States to the west coast without making proper preparations and without having a road map outlining the routes in which you would take to get to your destination. Yet, we go through life after entering the work force say at age 25 or before, work forty or more hard years, and have no more idea of where we are going financially than a man in the moon. Oh sure, somewhere along the way we may get a hot stock tip, a friend gives us an idea or two on real estate, or the like. But basically we do not have a definite plan or set of goals to guide us to financial independence. In addition to a lack of plan, other road blocks to financial independence are lack of discipline, spend rather than save (no delayed gratification), bad investments, inflation, current tax laws, and disability.

In the following weeks we will look at various ways to help you plan your financial goals, different investment vehicles to be used, and tax angles pertaining to the accumulation of these assets as well as the preservation of these assets once they have been accumulated.

Council Approves Norman Permit

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

Mrs. Rosa Lee Norman believes in letting people use their own property as they see fit so long as they're not hurting anyone else.

But she told Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon that she also thinks it is not fair to allow an automobile body and paint shop to have ingress and egress from a residential street, St. Paul Street, when the property fronts Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Mrs. Norman is a tall, handsome black woman whose message was as substantial as her appearance. She was speaking Monday in reference to an application filed by James Lee Pappas for a conditional use permit for an automobile body and paint shop on a 20,000 square foot parcel on the southeast corner of St. Paul Street and Virginia Beach Boulevard in the Lynnhaven Borough.

The property is in Atlantic Park, a black neighborhood which has been designated as a target area. A target area is a low-income neighborhood which has qualified for federal Community Development funds.

The Rev. Barnett Thoroughgood, chairman of the Council-appointed Task Force set up to recommend development patterns in target neighborhoods, opposed the permit. So did most of the residents of Seatack and surrounding area which Thoroughgood also represented.

Mrs. Norman personally did not object to the permit, only to the access on St. Paul Street, but she said she would support her neighbors. About 30, possibly more, were present at the Council meeting to support the opposition.

She said that it would like foolish to have half of St. Paul Street widened, which is what would happen if Pappas were allowed to have access from St. Paul. She asked if blacks were citizens only at election time and reasoned that Atlantic Park and Seatack, too, would not have been target areas if the city revenues had been put back into the neighborhood. She said she remembers how the residents themselves had to take up a collection for a street light in Seatack. As her voice and the content of her remarks rose to a crescendo, Mrs. Norman said the blacks have been "used, misused and accused... Someone has made slaves of us... I wonder if you know the situation truly?"

She said that after the Planning Commission meeting when the recommendation for approval of the application was made, "we didn't know who we could depend on." She said the Planning Commission took a break and was gone for one minute and 13 seconds, and returned with the recommendation. For that little time, she said, we could all have taken a break. "We knew what the verdict would be. We put our trust in you. We're dead in the middle and center of AICUZ."

The area is in the noise and crash zone of the Naval Air Station at Oceana, according to the AICUZ study (Air Impact Compatible Use Zone). Residential construction in these areas is discouraged.

As a result, Mrs. Norman said, they are told, "Don't build a house, don't add on, don't don't, don't all the time." That's what she meant, she said, when she said blacks are slaves. She said she had 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren and "I don't want them to go through what we've gone through."

The inconsistencies worry Mrs. Norman. She said that in Salt Marsh Point "in my back yard" the property owners are allowed to build "and I can't do anything." A half mile down the street, she said, building is going on, condominiums and all those nice things, but that when it comes to Seatack, it's "put your dirty work there, put your garage there..."

At one time, when AICUZ was not in the picture the people could not build because they did not have city sewer and they were told, she said, that the soil was not feasible septic tanks.

She said she could understand how conditions could be different in communities ten miles apart, but in the case of Salt Marsh Point, in affluent white development, and Seatack, the difference is a half mile.

Before Mrs. Norman had her turn at the lectern, Attorney Grover Wright, one of the city's most effective lawyers in zoning matters represented Pappas.

He pointed out that it was not rezoning that was being requested but a use permit. He pointed out that the property once had a use permit for a car wash and that all businesses are located on Virginia Beach Boulevard. His client agreed to all the conditions stipulated by the city, included the one which eliminated access on St. Paul Street. Pappas also agreed to install a sprinkling system in the entire building although this is not required for a building of that size. Pappas also volunteered to build a bus shelter in front of his establishment on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Thoroughgood also serves on the Citizens Advisory Committee said that somewhere along the line someone has to consider the types of business that should be put in the target areas. He said something should serve as a buffer between business and residential zoning. He said the neighborhood existed because there was an Air Station. "The Navy is encroaching on us, we are not encroaching on the Navy," he said. He saw a need to protect the millions of dollars of investment in Atlantic Park.

Jon Decker, attorney representing the Seatack United Community Civic League, said that because the area is a noise and crash zone is no reason that it should go all the way with a body shop. He said he was concerned that the children would get hurt. He added that there is a question over the title of a lot adjoining the business property.

Robert Albritton Jr., who believes the building will encroach on his property, will have to settle that problem with lawyers, he was told. Wright said the title aspect probably is a red herring. He said Pappas has a contract with the property owner and the present owner will have to settle that problem.

Chief Diezel said that Pappas will have to construct the shop under the State Code which covers the problems of explosive or toxic chemicals.

Then it was Mrs. Norman's turn to speak and she took every minute allotted to her before Mayor Louis R. Jones called time.

"It's not right," she concluded... I'm glad to have the opportunity to speak. You're supposed to look out for me and when it comes time for election, I'll look out for you." She said it has always been "take, take, take." We're going to have a Moses to deliver us... and I hope you don't act like sparrows... One day something is going to happen. Please consider us in Seatack."

Monday was not that day. Council approved the use permit by a vote of 8-1 with Councilwoman Barbara Henley dissenting. Henley had expressed concern over the chemicals which are used in a paint and body shop operation. Councilman John A. Baum and Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf were absent.

However, Mrs. Norman got her way in one respect. Ingress and egress will be on Virginia Beach Boulevard, not St. Paul Street. And Fire Chief Harry Diezel seemed pleased that Pappas was going to install a sprinkler system in the building which will be constructed of masonry.

She said it has always been "take, take, take." We're going to have a Moses to deliver us... and I hope you don't act like sparrows... One day something is going to happen. Please consider us in Seatack."

Monday was not that day. Council approved the use permit by a vote of 8-1 with Councilwoman Barbara Henley dissenting. Henley had expressed concern over the chemicals which are used in a paint and body shop operation. Councilman John A. Baum and Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf were absent.

However, Mrs. Norman got her way in one respect. Ingress and egress will be on Virginia Beach Boulevard, not St. Paul Street. And Fire Chief Harry Diezel seemed pleased that Pappas was going to install a sprinkler system in the building which will be constructed of masonry.

Robert Albritton Jr., who believes the building will encroach on his property, will have to settle that problem with lawyers, he was told. Wright said the title aspect probably is a red herring. He said Pappas has a contract with the property owner and the present owner will have to settle that problem.

Chief Diezel said that Pappas will have to construct the shop under the State Code which covers the problems of explosive or toxic chemicals.

Then it was Mrs. Norman's turn to speak and she took every minute allotted to her before Mayor Louis R. Jones called time.

"It's not right," she concluded... I'm glad to have the opportunity to speak. You're supposed to look out for me and when it comes time for election, I'll look out for you." She said it has always been "take, take, take." We're going to have a Moses to deliver us... and I hope you don't act like sparrows... One day something is going to happen. For Elderly, Transportation, Education

Seniors Seek $1.5 M, And A Lottery

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Virginia's first Silver Haired Legislature has overwhelmingly passed a bill calling for $1.5 million to be spent on public transportation for the elderly. The specially formed body also passed a bill calling for a statewide lottery.

Both bills, however, as well as any of the other 33 bills recently passed by the special legislature, must have a sponsor and be brought before the publicly elected General Assembly in January before they could become law.

"We asked for $1.5 million more for transportation," said Virginia Beach attorney Sam Houston, 83, who is the Senate president pro tempore of the 140-member Silver Haired Legislature. Houston said the state highway department knows how to handle public mass transportation but "they don't know the first thing about elderly transportation. This $1.5 million is for elderly who have a need."

"You have some elderly people who are enfeeble," Houston continued. "Some are blind. Some are crippled. They have to have special transportation. They're not concerned with mass transportation. They couldn't even see a bus or they couldn't get on a bus."

Virginia's first Silver Haired Legislature, a creation of Governor Charles Robb, recently concluded its first session in Richmond. The 40 senators and 100 delegates, all of whom are over 60 years of age, met for four days, August 7 through 10, and hammered out 35 bills which the legislators hope will be entertained by the real General Assembly when it convenes in January for its next session.

Silver Haired Legislature Readies 35 Bills For General Assembly

The Silver Haired Legislature, which had complete use of all Capitol facilities, was set up to mirror the real state legislature. Virginia Beach's two senatorial districts, the 7th and 8th, are represented by Beulah Humphries and Sam Houston, respectively. In the House, Virginia Beach delegates and their districts are as follows: Clifton Golden, 81st; Mary Ellen Cox, 82nd, and is also speaker of the House; Harold Curtis, 83rd; W. J. Wollard, 84th; and Ethylene Kristo, 85th.

Private industry raised $45,000 towards the establishment of the Silver Haired Legislature. The legislative services division of the General Assembly was responsible for taking the special legislature's bills and putting them into legal form, properly written for possible General Assembly consideration. The cost of printing of the final bills, with amendments, and sending them out to the real and Silver Haired Legislators will come out of the $45,000. If that money runs out, the State will probably step in.

Governor Robb has not committed himself to the perpetuation of the Silver Haired Legislature for another year but indicated to the body that he is in favor of it. As a result, Houston and Cox drew up a joint resolution calling for extending the legislators' terms of office and continuing the Silver Haired Legislature for another year. In addition, the resolution calls for an evaluation of the body and review of its rules and procedures.

Houston said the body realizes that it was initially brought into existence temporarily.

"A lot of newspapers picked this up as something to play with," Houston said. "But we're serious about this. It's a serious thing."

The Silver Haired session has concluded for this year, but "if the Governor goes through with what he's indicated, we'll be in existence for another year," Houston said.

The Silver Haired Legislature is broken down into seven committees, four of which report to the House and three to the Senate. House committees are, Housing and Education; Finance; Courts of Justice; and Health and Institutions. Senate committees are Labor and Commerce; General Law; and Social Services, of which Houston is a member. Each committee was allowed five bills for possible consideration by the real General Assembly.

From Houston's committee came at least five bills, 31 through 35. Bills from the special legislature are unicameral and not specified as being from the House or Senate. Nor are the lawmakers identified as Republican or Democratic.

Bill 31, calling for $1.5 for public transportation for the elderly, was passed 17-0 by the social services committee and 33-0 in the Senate. Bill 26 calling for a lottery passed the general law committee by a vote of 16 to 1 and by the Senate 27-7. The House also passed both bills but the votes were not carefully recorded, according to Pam Lathrop, senior planner, Virginia Department for the Aging.

Under the transportation bill, if approved by the General Assembly, the $1.5 million would be distributed to the 25 different service agencies which fall under the department of aging.

Three other bills which emanated from Houston's committee concern focusing more attention on the state's department of aging; the premature institutionalization of elderly people who have no family; and certification of various local agencies, institutions and corporations which service senior citizens.

In Virginia Beach, Houston says he'll "harp" on the transportation and lottery bills.

Noting that it costs motorists $1.75 a mile to operate a motor vehicle, Houston is calling for the purchase of radio-equipped vans which can transport 15 or more elderly people to various activities which may be held in different sections of a city. He says people in Pungo, for example, have a difficult time getting to activities which may be held at the Kempsville Recreation Center or the United Way Center.

In regard to the lottery bill, 50% of the money raised would go for the elderly and 50% for education. "We were thinking of children in the lower grades," he said.

The idea of a lottery is not new, and neither has it been popular in a general sense because of its perceived relationship to gambling.

"The reason for the lottery is simply this," Houston explains. "I don't believe in gimme, gimme, gimme unless you have it. I think under the circumstances you should propose a way the money can be secured you're asking for."

Schools React To Pressure To Begin, End School Earlier

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

For the first time in more than a decade, the first day of classes for Virginia Beach public school students will commence before the Labor Day holiday weekend.

Public school in Virginia Beach will begin this year on Monday, August 29 and will end on Thursday, June 7. As a result of the new school calendar, students will receive a five-day break when schools close at the end of the day on April 13 and reopen on April 23.

According to Jamie

Chapman, executive director of the Virginia Beach Education Association, teachers have been wanting a spring break for years.

Chapman said that traditionally from George Washington's Birthday in February to the end of school there were no breaks or vacation time.

"Teachers and students were really starting to react; and it wasn't a positive situation," Chapman said. "The teachers started screaming at us that they needed some type of break. The

Marine Science Museum

$1.2 Million Campaign Launched

The Trustees of The Virginia Museum of Marine Sciences Foundation, Inc., recently that they are launching an intensive campaign to raise $1.2 million over the next four months.

The purpose of the effort is to raise private money, chiefly for museum exhibits. The funding for exhibits is not included in the construction costs of the museum, which is estimated to be $4.7 million.

Foundation President John Griffin announced that Nancy A. Creech, local businesswoman and City Council member, has been named general chairperson of the drive. With the assistance of an executive committee made up of local business leaders, solicitation committees have been formed to seek gifts from industry, foundations, trustees, and the general community.

The slogan: "Sharing A Sense Of The Sea" has been adopted for the campaign, reflecting the marine wildlife and oceanographic and environmental exhibits planned for the museum. The Virginia Museum of Marine Sciences Foundation, Inc., a non profit group, was formed in late 1981 to provide private support for the museum.

The museum has been in planning stages for seven years. In April, The Virginia Beach Council gave the go-ahead for the construction, saying it would commit $3.5 million in city money, counting on $2 million from the State.

At a recent bid-opening, S.R. International, Inc. was the apparent low bidder on the project. Ground breaking for the museum is scheduled for late September.

Register To Vote

The Virginia Beach Education Association is sponsoring a voter registration drive, open to the public, on Tuesday August 23, in the main foyer of Pavilion.

City of Virginia Beach Voter Registrars will be at Pavilion from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Benefit Pickin' Slated

Well known local artists Curtis Waterfield and Fletcher Bryant head the list for the 4th annual Sandbridge Rescue Squad Pig Pickin' and Arts Festival, set for Saturday, Sept. 10 at Little Island Park.

Organizers of the event say the arts and crafts displays and exhibits will be bigger and better than ever. There will also be square dancing and pop music all afternoon for the enjoyment of the attendees.

The menu for the fund raising event has also been expanded. As well as barbecued pork, corn sticks, boiled potatoes, field peas and green beans this year organizers have added fried chicken and french fried potatoes. For the youngsters there will be popcorn and cotton candy.

Tickets, at $15 per person, are tax deductible. Information and tickets call Bill Moir at 426-7478.

Carolyn and Rachel Decker

For Shakespeare

Mother, Daughter Team Up

The Virginia Beach Shakespeare—By-The-Sea Festival this year includes four sets of performing husbands and wives and three sets of mothers and children, one of which is Carolyn and Rachel Decker.

Carolyn, 31, is a carpenter and has been an actress for 15 years. She plays the lead, "Isabella," a Novitiate, in "Measure for Measure," and also portrays "Phebe," a shepherd in "As You Like It."

Carolyn's daughter Rachel, 12, is a student at Plaza Junior High School. She has been acting for seven years and plays a page in both shows.

Carolyn says the two Shakespearean plays, which have been in rehearsals for three months, require much work compared to some contemporary plays.

"A lot more discipline is needed in Shakespeare," she said. "For every minute of performance time we rehearse for one hour."

The total number of cast members and technicians for both shows are about 40.

Performance dates for the festival, which will be held at the Pavilion Theatre, are: "Measure for Measure"—August 20, 24, 26, 28 and Sept. 1 and 3. "As You Like It"—August 19, 21, 25, 27, 31 and Sept. 2.

Jaycee Fishing Trip For Leukemia

The Virginia Beach Chapter of The Jaycees will hold a raffle for a marlin fishing trip to benefit the Leukemia Society of America. Tickets are on sale for $5 each. The drawing will be held Saturday Sept. 3.

According to Tom Hitt, project chairman, the value of the prize is approximately $1,000 and includes one day's full use of a 53 foot Hatteras fishing yacht, and all equipment for fishing in the gulf. The trip is being donated by Jack Holland of Virginia Beach.

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have recruited the help of the Norfolk Chapter in selling raffle tickets. In addition, they plan to solicit the assistance of corporate involvement. An award will be given to the business buying the most tickets.

The goal of the Jaycees is to raise $4,000 for the Virginia Chapter of the Leukemia Society of America. Proceeds will go toward programs in research, patient aid, and public and professional education. The Virginia Chapter is located at 1929 Coliseum Drive in Hampton, and serves nearly 500 patients throughout the state. For more information, call 588-1658 or 627-3471.

Older And Wiser

There are basically two reasons why seniors citizens are becoming increasingly more concerned over their rights and well being.

The life span of human beings has been stretched over the years by advances in medicine and technology. It is not at all uncommon for both men and women to live into their 80's and 90's, whereas years ago a relatively fewer number of persons lived that long.

But as science continues to prolong life, pressures and demands fall upon society to care for those people. And therein lies the other reason why seniors are becoming alarmed; their children are under pressure to provide for themselves, their spouses and offspring. Couples go through their life worrying about caring for their immediate family and are not used to attending to in-laws and parents who continue to live healthy, and sometimes not so healthy lives, year after year after year.

What is the answer? Who is responsible for the seniors?

The way it is going now, it looks like the seniors are tired of depending on others for their welfare and happiness. They are starting to unite, and place pressure on all levels of government to make provisions for this group of people that is growing larger and larger in number every day.

Estimates place Virginia's senior citizen population at 785,000, with almost 20,000 of them living in Virginia Beach. Traditionally, a very cynical view of seniors has placed them away in cheap apartments or expensive nursing homes because in many cases their families do not want to take the time, or spend the money to properly attend to their old parents like they attended to them and brought them into adulthood.

It's a shame and ought to be a crime that children would turn their backs on their parents because they become older and consequently need more attention and provisions than they once did as younger adults. In addition to seniors maintaining their physical health nowadays, they also have their mental health and faculties well in place. Just because they're old doesn't mean they don't feel pride, worth, humility, and also shame, resentment, and embarrassment that they can't fare for themselves as they once did. If anything, these feelings and emotions are as strong in their lives as ever. Maybe even more so because their ultimate fate seems to be slipping out of their hands and out of their control.

There are numerous silver haired legislatures across the country and it is hoped that Virginia keeps its group of seasoned thinkers on the front burner. They pay taxes, they have rights, and can contribute just as much to the law-making structure of this country as do some of the more youthful legislators.

There are a lot of parents out there living in big cold houses by themselves, clinging to each other in bonds of love, which have only become stronger after the kids have moved out and begun their own lives and families. But just because the kids grow up doesn't divorce them from the commitment and responsibility that their parents still hold in their hearts for their children.

Attendance And Shots

Virginia Beach public school officials are keeping their fingers crossed for two reasons.

First, for the first time in over a decade school is beginning before the Labor Day holiday weekend. The last time this was attempted, there was a public outcry and students stayed away from the schools that first week "in droves," according to Joe Lowenthal, public information specialist, Virginia Beach City Public Schools. Since then, however, studies have indicated that the public is ready to start and end school earlier and get a break in the spring.

In all likelihood, the first week's enrollment will be off a little bit. That's to be expected. But because this is not an experiment and the school system says it intends to keep the early starting time indefinitely, within a few years everything should be back to normal, maybe even a little better.

Another concern for school officials is over students who may try to return to school, or newly enroll, who do not have all their proper health shots or verification thereof.

Frankly, school officials expect some problems in this area, which is a far more complicated issue than starting school early. There are laws which say students have to be in school and receive an education. There are also laws which say that students who do not have all or most of their shots will not be allowed in school.

It is possible that there are some irresponsible parents who, for some reason or another, will not ensure that their children are properly immunized. If school records show, for example, that a student who is expected to return to school and does not because of not having the right shots, a visiting teacher will try to track that student down; although there are only seven visiting teachers for the city's 55,000 students. If the student and parents defy the school system's wishes and do not avail the student to the needed shots, it could then become a criminal matter.

Hopefully, all Virginia Beach students, new and returning ones, will go back to school on time and with all their shots. To do anything less would be foolish and unhealthy.

Editor:

While we were in Virginia Beach, our son David suffered a broken neck when he dove into the surf on July 18, 1983. We were to stay in Virginia Beach for only three days and then go on to Charlottesville, but as it turned out, we were in Virginia Beach for three weeks while our son was in Intensive Care in Virginia Beach General Hospital.

Being from Pennsylvania, we didn't know where to turn for help, but the people at Virginia Beach General Hospital were so wonderful in finding a place for us to stay and helping us through this troubled time.

Everyone involved acted in a thoroughly professional way. The lifeguards at Virginia Beach knew exactly what to do at the time of the accident and the Rescue Squad was there within ten minutes.

When our son was admitted to the Virginia Beach Emergency Ward, the people there were very much concerned about his well-being, checked on us and kept us up-to-date on his progress. Dr. Daniel Dillon was our son's neurosurgeon, and he stayed with us until 12:30 in the morning to keep us posted on our son's progress. Words can't really express how much Dr. Dillon and Dr. Paul Krup helped us during this ordeal.

I also want to thank all the nurses in the Intensive Care Unit of Virginia Beach General Hospital for doing such a wonderful job.

A special thanks to Mrs. Ola Dyr, from the hospital, for all her efforts and for finding a place for us to stay. We wish to also thank Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mann and Mrs. Avis Cavelli for welcoming us into their homes. We really know what "Southern Hospitality" is now because they made us feel like we were family.

We found some wonderful friends in Virginia Beach and we will never forget their love and kindness.

Virginia Beach Should Attend To Litter Problem

Editor:

My family and I recently completed a one-week vacation at Virginia Beach. The reason for this letter is to let you know how we felt about the conditions that exist concerning litter in that area.

It was hard to go anywhere along Atlantic and Pacific Avenues, as well as elsewhere, without seeing trash such as beer bottles, sometimes broken, empty boxes from stores, merchandise placed along the curb instead of in trash containers for pickup, as well as other unsightly objects laying in the streets.

Although it may seem the main culprit of littering is the tourist, store owners themselves are just as guilty in this matter.

Virginia Beach is a nice place to visit, but the sight of all this junk on the streets tends to make it appear as though it is a tourist slum area and takes away from vacation joys. Even though there are adequate trash containers this matter exists. This also holds true for litter in the sand along the ocean front. Something should be done about it!

Because tourism is the main economic factor in Virginia Beach, this area should be more attractive to all who visit there.

I propose that all property owners, and I'm sure that this is already a city ordinance, should be held responsible for their individual property boundaries and such boundaries should be kept clean and neat. Since property owners make money from tourists, let them clean up after them and themselves. Likewise, city streets and the beach itself should be maintained better by city workers. My family and I have nice memories of Virginia Beach, but we also have some that are not so nice.

Prayer Issue

Editor:

Some of our Congressmen, after long and arduous effort (20 years to be exact), have arrived at a solution to the prayer issue. They say that we must have a Constitutional amendment, but as this is a cumbersome process, it could possibly take years to accomplish.

While it is true that a Constitutional amendment could resolve the school prayer issue...it is not necessary.

It would appear that our Congressmen have never read the Constitution. It is within the power of Congress (only requiring a majority vote) to enact legislation restricting the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. This applies, not only to the prayer issue, but to other issues in which the judiciary has usurped its authority.

Government was created by the people and its powers are derived through consent of the people. If we remain silent...we are consenting.

Catch A Ride On Molly

It was a sticky hot Saturday afternoon when I took my first ride on a Virginia Beach trolley. "Molly" was its name.

Since I was parked at the north end of the resort strip and required to be at the southern end shortly thereafter, this was the perfect time to drop my quarter in the slot and get a first-person impression of the vehicles modeled after San Francisco cablecars. Virginia Beach has several of them running daily during the summer on Atlantic Avenue for the convenience of locals and tourists.

Off The Record

By Greg Goldfarb

After walking for about a block or two I noticed Molly rolling up behind me. I stopped, waved, and presto brake she stopped at my feet idling quietly. After hopping aboard, "dropping the coin in the slot, and taking a seat behind the driver the first thing I noticed, which for some reason I hadn't expected, was music. It was coming from a speaker in the ceiling. Factory installed. The FM radio was built into Molly's dash.

Looking around, there weren't that many people in the richly trimmed wood and brass bus. But I was at about 34th Street when I caught the ride. As we moved closer into the heart of the strip the trolley became more crowded.

Molly's driver was attired in shorts, a t-shirt, high-top leather basketball shoes and was wearing violet sunglasses. The gold jewelry on his wrist reflected the sun's midday rays.

The trolleys are relatively quiet in motion and fun to ride. You can hang out the window looking at the tourists who are taking pictures of you and the trolley with their cameras. These types of photos are easy to take because no flash is required. I must have counted at least three camerabugs shooting away at Molly as it passed.

By this time I was standing at the back of the trolley, outdoors on its caboose-like rear platform, sweating like a dog. It was a humid afternoon. As I was standing there some passengers engaged me in conversation about Virginia Beach's finer points. I proceeded to tell them some of the things I knew about Virginia Beach, and in turn asked them some things about Canada.

By the time our conversation ended I realized we were back from where we started. I had so much fun on Molly I forgot to get off at my pre-arranged destination. Oh well, that's life.

civic circles for years, is a regular visitor to City Council meetings.

"There is hardly a council meeting that's held that there isn't approval of a lottery permit for Sunday school classes, churches; bingo and raffles."

But are bingo and raffle permits the same as a lottery?

"Well it's gambling," Houston responds. "In other words, you're putting something up to win." Houston says some groups of seniors charter a bus to Baltimore where they participate in lotteries, gambling, "slot machines and stuff like that." He also notes that lotteries are legal in 12 states, although not in Virginia.

"It's something that has to be considered," he maintains, "because what we're talking about are actual, physical needs of the elderly; people who are not taken care of by the state."

Houston is a Protestant, a ruling elder at his church, and says the question of a lottery should not be equated to betting.

"This has nothing to do with para-mutual betting, racing tracks or anything of that kind," he said. "This is for a segment of the population; listen, elderly people are growing (in number) more and more everyday because of what we have learned in medicine."

Houston points out that Social Security is having problems and social programs across the board are being cut. Elderly people on fixed incomes, he contends, need continued assistance.

"The reason we wanted 50% for education and 50% for elderly is very simple," he said. "I have no children in the schools. Why should I pay taxes for the schools? That's a question everybody passes over. They say, 'well, you're part of the community so you should contribute to it.'" He added that his local taxes have climbed over 500% while his income has remained frozen.

Houston said some local churches do not always provide for the elderly and only the rich can get into some senior citizens facilities such as Westminster-Canterbury in Virginia Beach. Houston, who for a time was full-time counsel for the facility, said the lowest priced unit at Westminster is $39,000 plus a monthly payment.

"The upper brackets of the churches can go there but others can't afford it," he said. "I think the churches should do something for the low and moderate income."

Compounding the question of caring for the elderly is the premise that younger people and society no longer care for the elderly like they once did.

"The elderly people in the nation have been neglected," Houston said. "They've been set off to the side. This is not right."

Houston said there has been 288 different pieces of legislation passed by the U.S. Congress dealing with

Beach Tax Relief For Seniors

Per the 1980 census, there were 18,542 senior citizens living in Virginia Beach. Because many of their incomes are "fixed" or "frozen," senior citizens' advocate Sam Houston feels they should have special tax relief under the law, which they do.

"I think on the basis of their income they should be given tax relief," he said.

In Virginia Beach, seniors do not receive tax relief on their personal property, which assumes a tax rate of $6 per $100. For real estate taxes, however, there are exemptions but the 80% tax rate on every $100 of value stays the same.

The following qualifications must be met by seniors to obtain tax relief:

- Be over 65 years of age or be totally disabled.
- Disabled, two letters from doctors are needed as proof. Or if the person is a disabled veteran and already verified by Social Security or the Veterans Administration, the doctors' letters are not needed.

- Annual income not exceed $13,000 unless the senior is disabled, then ceiling is raised to $17,000.

- Assets not exceed $35,000, excluding the person's residence.

- Must be at least a two-year Virginia Beach resident.

Seniors have the option of receiving real estate tax relief under one of two programs: Under the "exemption" program, taxes are paid based on a sliding scale. If the senior is earning less than $6,000 annually, for example, they qualify for complete real estate tax exemption. If they earn over $13,000 they do not qualify for exemption. Under the "deferral" program, if they meet all qualifications they will get complete tax exemption. But if the senior sells the property or dies, back taxes must be paid.

COURTESY and FAIRNESS Kline Chevrolet ...build a business FOR NEARLY 60 YEARS BIGGER AND STILL THE BEST

A Personal Message From Irving Kline
and Jimmie Kline of Kline Chevrolet
Sales Corp.

When this Chevrolet Sales and Service agency was started nearly 60 years ago we adopted the watch-words "Courtesy" and "Fairness," we determined that these words would have real meaning for those who came in contact with us in our future years.

Throughout the lean years and fat years that followed, the wisdom of this philosophy has been brought home to us with increasing clarity. This "Golden Rule" as applied to our business has far greater value than the monetary profit it brings through satisfied customers, who return again and again to us for a solution to their business and personal transportation needs. It is a source of pride and a feeling of "being right with the world" that could not be ours if we did not enjoy the friendships and confidence of those with whom we deal.

So, it is quite natural that we promise continuance of a policy that has stood us in such good stead...that has brought us to our present high place in the regard of our friends and G.M. We make our bid for your patronage on this basis...an honest product sold and serviced with courtesy and fairness.

Sincerely,
Irving B. Kline

Officials Hopeful Over New School Calendar

only way you could get that was to get the kids back before Labor Day."

Chapman said that after years of surveys, letters, and public input, school administrators decided to allow for the break in the teaching calendar. The last time similar schedule was set, it resulted in negative reactions from the public and first-day enrollment dropped.

Since then, public sentiment has changed and Chapman expects the new schedule will be met with approval.

"We think it will be very successful but you can't see the results of that until this spring when people say, 'thank goodness, we have a spring break,'" Chapman said, "and the kids get away from school and the teachers do also; and people kind of get rejuvenated and finish out the year like it should instead of dragging on and on and on."

"But the problem is we don't believe there's been a strong public awareness of when the kids have to go back...it's really got us on pins and needles."

Chapman said that if the enrollment is down during the first week a spring break might not be provided for during the following school year.

Joe Lowenthal, public information specialist,

Virginia Beach City Public Schools, said that the schedule change is in response to the teachers, students and parents desire for the break. He said that unless something completely unforeseen happens, the spring break will become a regular part of the school year.

Free Shots Available

Virginia Beach students and parents are reminded that all students must have their proper shots before they will be allowed in school. If the series of shots is underway, verification must be presented to school officials.

Virginia Beach students may obtain their free shots from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Tuesdays in the city's health department clinic at 19th Street and Arctic Avenue; 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Municipal Center Clinic; and from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Fridays at the Bayside health clinic, 930 Independence Boulevard.

Bush Wins

Virginia Beach Kick Boxer Curtis Bush recently won by decision over Marc Neal in the main event of a card held in China Grove N.C.

A large crowd was on hand for the fights. Bush punched his record up to 15-2 with 10 knockouts. A challenge has been given by Bush to State Pro Super Welterweight Champion Bubba Walters of Chesapeake to defend his title. Walters listed record stands at 15-4-11. The nickname of the "Explosive Thin Man" has been given to Bush.

Correction

The City Council headline in last week's issue on page 9 should have read, "Council Approves Pappas Permit."

5,000 Attend Flea Market

Approximately 5,000 people attended the two-day Antique and Flea Market Extravaganza Show and Sale, held recently at the Pavilion convention center.

Sponsored by Surfside Productions, Virginia Beach, Tom Harp, president, the show featured 200 exhibitors from as far away as Pennsylvania and Florida, who sold approximately $20,000 in merchandise. Marie Ward, secretary to Harp who also owns Golden Harp Antiques on Virginia Beach Boulevard, said there are three similar shows held each year. This is the fifth or sixth year the shows have been held.

Ward said the show is held because "we enjoy it and love doing it."

Seniors Have Been Neglected

elderly people. Sixty of them have dealt with transportation. But despite his "pleading" and correspondence with national political figures, such as Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman, the current administration has "taken no steps of any kind administratively to examine the lack of coordination" between various existing agencies set up for the elderly.

In addition to children not "looking at their parents like they used to," Houston said elderly people are also having their constitutional rights violated.

"I think yes," he said. "They're been discriminated (against) completely by the younger people."

Houston said some elderly people suffer from inadequate housing and live in unsanitary conditions. He said that while he was on the city's planning commission the federal department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) came to Virginia Beach in 1974 and specified 12 target areas in the city which needed rehabilitation. He said there were up to 200 outshouses in the city and 600 homes in need of serious repairs.

Houston is married to the former Flora Virginia Kail, a school classmate. They have one child, Sam Houston, Jr., and live in the Birdneck Point section of Virginia Beach.

Houston received his law degree at George Washington University, Washington, D.C., and was alumni association president of the university in 1960-61.

In 1937 Houston was admitted to practice law in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; and in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and the United States Supreme Court in 1950. In November, 1972, he began practicing in the Supreme Court of Virginia.

Houston served in the U.S. Navy during World War II, retiring in 1946 with the rank of commander. In 1946 he joined the legal department as general attorney for the headquarters staff of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Companies operating in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia until he retired in 1965 and moved to Virginia Beach.

In 1968 Houston was appointed by City Council to the Mayor's Committee on Aging, a position he still holds.

In 1971 Houston was appointed by City Council to be a director for the Southeastern Virginia Area-wide Model Program for Seniors, (SEVAMP), which encompasses six cities and two counties and is the largest service district in the state. Houston still serves as a director, after serving two-year terms as president, beginning in Sept. 1979. He has been succeeded as president, as of last January, by Mary Wells of Isle of Wight County.

Other civic activities in which Houston has been involved include, serving as an advisor to the Citizen's Advisory Committee under the federal Department of Housing and Development. He continues to serve in this capacity to this date. Since 1977 he has been a steering committee member of the Virginia Coalition of Aging. He is a charter member of the Virginia Association on Aging and of the Southeastern District Committee on Special Transportation. He served one year on the Governor's Committee on Aging; a delegate to the 1981 Whitehouse Conference on Aging; Attorney Emeritus for the Westminster-Canterbury Home for the Elderly; and is a member of the Virginia Beach and Virginia Bar Associations.

At-Large

Meeting Date: Aug. 15, 1983

Briefing 11 a.m. McCoy, R. Jones and L. Jones absent.

Col. R.E. Hudson, district engineer, Norfolk County, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers presented a Beach Erosion Control and Hurricane Protection Plan for the beach from Rudee Inlet to Fort Story.

Informal Session 12:30 p.m. Mayor Jones absent.

R. Jones reported on meeting of the Virginia Municipal League Legislative Committee in Richmond. He said the committee is now drafting the program for the VML meeting in James City County. Of the beach's four proposals he said the Public Procurement Act, regarding the hiring of professionals, has been deferred pending a VML report, the Contraband Forfeiture Act has been accepted, the hearing of ABC profits on the basis of Taylor Murphy rather than Census reports has been denied, and the rollback taxes proposal has been accepted.

LCAC

Jennings reported that after the visit to Panama City to observe the Navy's LCAC's, the LCAC Committee is still opposed to stationing the air cushion landing craft in Virginia Beach.

Gun Control

Council decided to place consideration of its gun control ordinance on a future agenda in light of the decision of the Attorney General that the ordinance was unconstitutional.

Planning

Kitchin proposed that the planning procedures should be reviewed. He said that applicants should not be permitted to change their rezoning requests to another category at the Planning Commission at the City Council level. He said the applicants should have to go through the whole process again unless all the backup material for the requested change is included by the Planning Department. He said developers "have got us on the defensive" by stressing affordable housing. McCoy countered that the Council of Civil Organizations' talk of a moratorium is equally unreasonable. Creech said some flexibility should be allowed.

Industrial Revenue Bonds

Oberndorf, reporting on her Alaskan meeting, said that other cities are concerned about the prolific issuance of industrial revenue bonds, which are 80 percent tax-free, because of the effect they have on the sale of municipal bonds.

VML Delegates

Mayor Jones was named delegate and Vice Mayor Henley alternate to the Virginia Municipal League meeting in James City County.

Executive Session 1:30 p.m. Mayor Jones absent.

Formal Session 2:25 p.m. Mayor Jones absent during early portion.

Class instruction will include accident prevention, first aid, handling emergencies, supervising children, diapering, feeding and bathing babies, toddler care and entertainment and behavioral characteristics of young children.

It is necessary to pre-register for class by calling Rhonda Bailey at 499-2311.

Museum Gets Plaque

A bronze plaque commemorating the Virginia Lifesaving Stations has been recently unveiled at the oceanfront Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum on 24th Street.

The museum used to be the Seateck lifesaving station from 1903 to 1915, at which time the building became an active Coast Guard station until 1969. In 1980 the city renovated the structure and had it declared a Virginia Historic Landmark and placed it on the National Register of Historic Places.

Museum Director Richard E. Rumble said the plaque, presented by the Richmond Council Navy League, was given to the museum because "this is one of the few stations which has been restored and preserved." He added that there are a couple of active stations on the eastern shore, but "this would be a very good place to put it."

The plaque, 16" by 24" and lists the 16 Virginia lifesaving stations from Popes Island to False Cape, is in honor of "Those Who Faithfully Served Along Virginia Shores."

Also honored at the presentation was the USS Coast Guard on its 193 birthday.

Rising Rental Costs Seen Through '80's

If some real-estate experts are right, renters of homes and apartments will find their housing costs taking a bigger slice of their paychecks as the 1980's progress.

These observers believe economic forces and the changing makeup of the population in this country will create heavy demand for rental dwellings at a time when the supply of those properties is comparatively modest. "For most of the 1970's, in most of the country, rents were a real bargain," says Lewis Bolan, vice president of Real Estate Research Corp., a consulting firm. Rents are not headed for "exorbitant" levels, he maintains, but renters who have grown used to spending less than 25 percent of their income for housing may find that percentage heading up toward 30. Generalizations about real-estate trends nationwide are very local creatures, and what's happening in Cincinnati or Denver, for example, may bear little resemblance to conditions in Houston or Miami. Nevertheless, Bolan and other students of real estate say there are some strong national factors that appear likely to exert upward pressure on rents, and conversely to make investments in rental properties more attractive.

Compared to such other types of real estate as office buildings, shopping centers and hotels, rental housing was considered unappealing by many investors and developers in the 1970's. Thus, apartments were "underbuilt" during that period, say Ayco Corp., a firm that specializes in personal financial planning.

Like most other forecasts of economic and social trends, this one isn't guaranteed to be accurate. But assuming that the logic behind it is borne out, how should people respond to protect, and maybe even improve, their own finances?

Renters can consider signing the longest lease available, Bolan says. Redouble their efforts to accumulate enough savings to buy a home or condominium. Rising rents would enhance the appeal of owning, say, a two-family home - an option open to a sizeable number of people. But anyone contemplating such a move should be aware that rental property ownership, even on a small scale, requires active management.

Triple-Amputee Vet To Lead Disabled American Veterans

"Just let me die!" whispered the young soldier to his platoon sergeant seconds after a Viet Cong "booby trap" land mine mangled his body.

Unwilling to listen to such talk, the seagiant ordered Dennis A. Joyner to stop wishing for death, telling him he had much to live for. "Right then," the Vietnam combat vet says today, "my whole attitude turned around. I wanted to be a winner—to overcome any obstacle life put in my way."

After losing both legs and an arm, the Apollo, Pa., man found life's obstacles steep, but he came out a winner. Today, his fellow members of the three-quarter-million-member Disabled American Veterans (DAV) chose him to lead their organization through the coming year. The election took place at the DAV's national convention in Los Angeles.

Joyner fears his year at the DAV's helm will be one of the most difficult years in the history of veterans' affairs. "A full decade has passed since the signing of the Paris Peace Accords ended the Vietnam War," he commented. "And so many have forgotten that national Outstanding veterans' benefits are part of the cost of war, that our country has a moral obligation to those who spilled their blood or lost their health while defending us.

"Combine that forgetfulness with the demand for reduced government spending," he continued, "and you've got a real problem for veterans, particularly disabled vets."

In response, Joyner said, he'll work to increase membership in the DAV, a nonprofit association to which more than a third of all service-connected disabled veterans already belong. He's shooting for a million DAV members by 1985. And, Joyner stated, "The DAV needs to further increase its effectiveness in our nation's capital."

Joyner has served the DAV well at the national, state, and local levels. He was elected to several DAV national vice command offices prior to attaining the office of national commander. At the DAV Department of Pennsylvania second and third junior vice commanders, and he was commander and chapter service officer of DAV Chapter 36 in his hometown of Vandergrift, Pa. In 1977, the triple amputee was selected as the DAV's national Outstanding Disabled Veteran of the Year.

Joyner, the fourth Vietnam veteran to hold a one-year term as DAV national commander was wounded in June 1969 while patrolling the Mekong Delta in Vietnam as a member of the U.S. Army's 9th Infantry Division. His acts of bravery and devotion to duty earned him many citations, including the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, Army Commendation Medal, Vietnam Service Badge, and Combat Infantry Badge.

In addition to serving the DAV, the combat veteran is active in civic and church activities. He is a member of the VFW, AMVETS, and American Legion and was appointed to serve on the Pennsylvania Vietnam Heredity Commission by Pennsylvania Governor Richard L. Thornburgh.

Joyner served four years as the Westmoreland County Juvenile Service Center accountant and was fiscal manager for the Westmoreland County Courts in Greensburg, Pa. In 1979 he was appointed Westmoreland County court administrator, responsible for administration of the eight-judge court system and all court-related offices.

A board member of the Westmoreland County and Employment Training Administration, Joyner is also auditor for his congregation of the United Presbyterian Church.

A 1975 graduate of Robert Morris College, Pittsburgh, Pa., Joyner received his bachelor of arts degree in accounting. He also received an associate of arts degree from the Community College of Allegheny County in 1974.

Joyner lives in Apollo, Pa., with his wife, Donna. He is the father of two young sons, Dennis Jr., and Paul.

VA Tech Receives Gift

BLACKSBURG-- Former Virginia First Lady Eddy Dalton has contributed $10,000 to support special education programs in Virginia Tech's College of Education.

The contribution was part of funds from the First Lady's Mental Retardation Project begun by Mrs. Dalton. Money raised from the sale of her cookbook has been used to support programs for the mentally retarded, learning disabled, and other children requiring special education.

According to College of Education Dean Robert M. Smith, part of the contribution will be used in the college's new Institute for the Study of Exceptionalities. In addition, he said, "Financial support will help allow superior students to enter the field of special education, a field in which the state lacks an adequate number of qualified professional personnel."

The Institute for the Study of Exceptionalities is a resource center for assistance to exceptional children. According to Director John A. McLaughlin, associate professor of administrative and educational services, the institute grew out of a task force formed two years ago to investigate ways the college might more completely address the issues of special education. A task force recommended the establishment of an organization through which those interested in special education could interact and eventually provide services to the people of the state, in addition to research.

One of the first goals of the institute will be to establish an information bank of resources within Virginia to which children and their parents can be referred through a toll-free hotline. Parents, physicians, and school personnel will be able to call the institute and receive information on resource people and services in their communities.

The six important questions to ask before listing your house.

When you're ready to sell, you want to make sure you list with someone who has all the tools to help you best sell your house. The most important thing is this: Don't just list with anybody.

To compare, ask these six questions:

1. Do you have a referral network so you can send me potential buyers from all across the country?
2. Do you have a display of photos in your office so people can preview my house?
3. Are all your salespeople professionally trained?
4. Do you advertise extensively in newspapers and on the radio?
5. Will you put into writing exactly what you will do for me or else I can cancel the listing?
6. Do you spend over $20,000.00 to advertise on television so effectively that more than 9 out of 10 potential buyers recognize your sign in front of my house?

There is only one real estate sales organization that can answer yes to all these questions.

The Real Rate Of Return

Courtesy of
C. Randolph Hudgins III
Wheat, First Securities, Inc.

The real rate of return is the difference between an investment yield and the current inflation, or deflation rate. In April of 1981 the real rate of return turned positive. That is to say the yield on corporate bonds was greater than the inflation rate. In January of 1981 the Bond Buyer 20 Bond Index averaged 9.66% but the inflation rate was 11.71%. Thus the investor was not keeping up with inflation. The following table illustrates the real rate of return over the last two years.

January	-2.05	4.83	5.75
February	-1.24	5.30	6.12
March	-0.39	6.03	5.56
April	0.60	6.02	5.11
May	0.94	5.22	5.63
June	1.10	5.34	6.94

July	0.41	5.79	--
August	1.39	5.33	--
September	1.95	5.65	--
October	2.59	4.62	--
November	2.33	5.46	--
December	3.97	6.09	--

The return on corporate bonds has changed very little in the past 30 months. In January of 1981 the Bond Buyer 20 Bond Index averaged 9.66%. In June of 1983 it averaged 9.52%. The major change is in the inflation rate which has dropped from 11.7% in January of 1981 to 2.58% in June of 1983. It is not likely that the gap between the bond index and inflation will stay at its level of 6.94%. If inflation increases due to the economic recovery we may find ourselves once again struggling to out distance inflation just as we were in the beginning of 1981.

Varieties Has Glitter Of Hollywood

The most unique new restaurant and night spot in Virginia Beach has opened its doors. When you pass through these doors, however, be prepared to leave the real world behind. Inside Varieties you'll find all the magic and glitter of Hollywood.

The lobby is a veritable theatrical store room, with props, production equipment and movie memorabilia.

You can choose from numerous movie sets in which to eat, including a Parisian street scene old New Orleans or Rick's Cafe from Casablanca. At night, the servers even wear the costumes of famous celluloid characters to complete the Tinseltown fantasy.

The menu at Varieties is casual, but also very intriguing. There are fifty items to choose from, ranging from huge Stuffed Potato Acapulco, Stir Fried Shrimp, and a Build-Your-Own Zorba Burger. Entrees start at just $2.95. Add one of the delicious specialty drinks and a selection from the dessert menu and any night of the week becomes a night for Varieties.

After your meal, be sure and enjoy Varieties Lounge. A table is yours just for the asking. The entertainment is non-stop. For dancing or listening, Varieties plays the music you like best. The breaks are filled with trivia games and a special zainness known as Midnight Madness. Anything can happen in Varieties Lounge, and usually does.

"Customers will never be bored here," Varieties manager Steve Schmirch said. "There is so much going on, it's like a new experience, each time you come. We've got something for everybody."

Varieties will be open seven days a week for lunch and dinner, beginning at 11 a.m. Monday through Saturday. Sunday hours are 10 a.m. - 10 p.m. with a champagne brunch beginning several weeks after opening.

The concept of Varieties was developed by VICORP Restaurants, based in Denver, Colorado. The restaurant will employ approximately 150 people.

Dominion Bankshares Announces Purchase

In a joint statement issued today, John B. Bernhardt, President of Virginia National Bankshares, Inc., and Randolph W. McElroy, President of First & Merchants Corporation, announced that Dominion Bankshares, Inc. has agreed to purchase the VNB Norton and Wise branches and the F&M Coeburn branch proposed for divestiture in connection with their application for regulatory approval of their merger.

Central Fidelity Bank, Inc., originally announced as purchaser of the offices, had agreed to the purchase contingent on their proposed acquisition of Virginia Citizens Bank of Clintwood. The proposed acquisition was subsequently rejected by the stockholders of Virginia Citizens, and Central Fidelity, therefore, withdrew its offer.

The completion of the branch divestitures is subject to execution of definitive purchase agreements and approval by the appropriate regulatory authorities. In addition, the sales of the offices are contingent upon the completion of the merger between Virginia National and First & Merchants following approval by shareholders and regulators. The target date for completion of the merger and of the branch divestitures is December 31, 1983.

Planning For Financial Security

By Herbert C. Perlin
Perlin Finance

Last week we looked at a very sad statistic which showed that 97 out of 100 Americans will fail financially after 40 years of hard work. The primary cause is people do not plan for their financial security.

The accumulation of wealth and the income in which it can generate is not a pie in the sky, get rich quick mechanism. For the majority of us, it is a slow, sometimes painful, accumulation of bits and pieces that, in the sum, represents a substantial accumulation from different investment vehicles. Since one must plan the accumulation of these assets it is only reasonable that some form of goal setting take place before one is ready to journey toward financial independence.

I would suggest that in the family situation you and your wife, if married, treat your income, from whatever source, as a small business. You and your spouse are the board of directors of this company and, therefore, will set policy both as to revenues generated and expenditures made. Make a list of all obligations; utilities, food, clothing, insurance, debt obligations, entertainment, and the like. Then balance this off with the revenues that are currently being generated. The difference between these two, after tax considerations and social security withholdings, should be your discretionary income. It is in this area that one should strive to save a substantial portion, particularly in the early years of accumulation.

A good rule of thumb is to save not less than 10% of your gross income a year. I dare to say if each one of you go back over the past 5 to 10 years and take 10% of your gross income that you and/or your spouse earned together, the vast majority of the readers would fall farshort of the 10%. Be honest with yourself when you look at these accumulations since appreciation of values from real estate, stocks, bonds, savings interest, life insurance should not be counted.

I have yet to meet an individual, family, or business man who has saved 10% of his gross income consistently and well on his way to financial independence. Remember, it is not how much you earned over a lifetime but rather how much you have retained (saved).

In goal setting be sure that the goals are broken down into three classifications: A. Current year goals. B. Three to five year goals. C. Long term (retirement) goals.

Also be sure that you understand the difference between dreams and definite plans. Everybody thinks about their retirement - but, few of us make definite plans for it. What does this mean? A dream is not a plan. It is a fantasy. For example, everybody wants to travel when they retire. That's a dream. Some know where they will travel and how they will afford it. That's a definite plan. Finally, by sure that your goal setting is in line with a specific plan, both as to definite amounts and time tables.

Next week we'll take a closer look at the road blocks that cost so many of us to fail financially even with all good intentions and plans for the future. Until then, stay healthy, see you next week.

"Some People Know Us By The Company We Keep."

Herbert L. Perlin, MBA, CLU
District Manager

MAKING MONEY IS YOUR BUSINESS - MAKING SURE YOU KEEP IT IS OURS.
Doctors, lawyers, accountants, politicians, business owners, and executives we serve know how to earn money. We show them ways to keep it.

Many of our clients work with us to determine the value of their personal estates or businesses. Our Financial Valuation Service can help establish the financial objectives best suited to our clients' needs.
For example, our professionals will determine that a client's tax bracket can be lowered by incorporating. This can shift some income to a 15% tax bracket rather than 50%. Or, we can establish a tax deductible pension plan which reduces taxable income with our reducing actual income and also permits tax-free accumulation of your investments.

PROFESSIONAL PLANNING IS MORE THAN A CATCH PHRASE TO US.

Our Professional Planning Service is based upon your needs and objectives - not ours. We thoroughly analyze your business, financial, and family situation to determine how well your objectives are being accomplished. Then and only then do we begin to make recommendations.
Our service is confidential, ongoing, and includes annual reviews.

FOR NEARLY 60 YEARS BIGGER AND STILL THE BEST

and Jimmie Kline of Kline Chevrolet
Sales Corp.

When this Chevrolet Sales and Service agency was started nearly 60 years ago we adopted the watch-words "Courtesy" and "Fairness," we determined that these words would have real meaning for those who came in contact with us in our future years.

Throughout the lean years and fat years that followed, the wisdom of this philosophy has been brought home to us with increasing clarity. This "Golden Rule" as applied to our business has far greater value than the monetary profit it brings through satisfied customers, who return again and again to us for a solution to their business and personal transportation needs. It is a source of pride and a feeling of "being right with the world" that could not be ours if we did not enjoy the friendships and confidence of those with whom we deal.

So, it is quite natural that we promise continuance of a policy that has stood us in such good stead...that has brought us to our present high place in the regard of our friends and G.M. We make our bid for your patronage on this basis...an honest product sold and serviced with courtesy and fairness.

Sincerely,

The King And His Court

It started as an idea, a dream. A festival of festivals, centered around a community. A week of fun and enjoyment for the citizens of Virginia Beach. Now after a decade, the dream has come true, every year for ten years. This year's festival dates are September 28th through October 2nd.

Although some of the activities have changed, the focal point of the Neptune Festival, the selection of the king and his court, still commands the attention once reserved for Renaissance royalty.

This year's King Neptune Court is no exception. Eight princesses were selected to represent each of the eight high schools in Virginia Beach. Each princess was selected on the basis of academic achievements, honors, participation in school activities, community involvement, poise and appearance.

The princesses will accompany King Neptune X at all festival events and will serve as good will ambassadors throughout the year. Aside from Neptune Festival events, the king's court will be available for public appearances at civic and charitable events.

The 1983 Royal Court is represented as follows: Beverly Lynn Kidd of Cox High School, is the daughter of Mr. William L. Kidd and Ms. Carolyn Stubbs. Beverly has participated in several scholastic activities including executive council, sophomore class vice-president, cheerleading squad, fine arts club, Spanish Club, and Homecoming Queen, while maintaining a "B" average in her studies.

"Being a member of King Neptune X's Court would mean participating in the biggest event in Virginia Beach. It would always be a pleasure to look back and say that I was a part of this joyous event."

Cynthia Kay Barr, representing Cape Henry Collegiate School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Barr. Cindy has participated in the 1982-83 Cape Henry Collegiate Drama productions of "The Importance of Being Earnest," maintains a "B" average and plans on continuing her studies beyond high school.

"My participation in the 10th Annual Virginia Beach Neptune Festival would allow me to take part in activities outside of school and learn more about a community in which I have lived for only three years."

Judith A. Lim, daughter of Rustico and Angelica A. Lim, will represent Bayside High School. Judith maintains a perfect "A" average and is a recipient of the principal's list award, best Spanish student award, Sophomore class president, Junior ring dance chairman, active member of the student Council association, forensic team, year book staff and tennis team.

"Pride is a very important factor to the people of Virginia Beach, and I would especially like to show my pride of both Bayside High School and Virginia Beach by being a Neptune Princess, for there is much to be proud of for both."

Allison H. MacIver, representing First Colonial High School, is the daughter of Carol D. MacIver. While maintaining a "B+" average, Allison is also a member of the cheerleading squad, German Club, French Club, newspaper staff, Student Council Association representative, a top 20 finisher in the State Math Contest, and drill team member.

"I would be extremely proud to represent First Colonial High School as its Neptune Festival Princess, as I would finally be participating in an event that has become a very enjoyable part of my life in Virginia Beach."

Sharen Christie Mendoza, daughter of Conrad and Gloria Mendoza, will represent Green Run High School. Christie's activities include secretary of the Student Council Association, the 1982-83 Madrigals, regional chorus member, debate team, 1982-83 leadership workshop, 1982-83 National Forensics League, and ski club member. Christie maintains a "B" average.

"Becoming a member of King Neptune X's would be an honorable and rewarding experience. It would give me the opportunity to meet new people and form new friendships."

Lisa Anderson, representing Kellam High School, is the daughter of Judith and Gerald Anderson. Lisa is a member of the drill team, French Club, Junior achievement, Keyettes, Future Homemakers of America, Junior Senate, and track team. "I have a great deal of pride in Virginia Beach. Having lived in this area for five years, I would like to express my pride in the city by being a princess in such an interesting and fun-filled festival."

Debra Tate, representing Kempsville High School, is the daughter of Robert and Donna Tate. Debi, whose excellent scholastic average has earned her the honor of being listed in "Who's Who in High School Students," is also a member of the French Club, science club, Latin Club and Keyettes Club.

"Being a member of the Neptune Festival Court for 1983 would be a great honor. It would allow me the chance to serve my community and to get involved."

Caroline Shrum, representing Princess Anne High School, is the daughter of Agnes and Sonny Shrum. Caroline is a member of the Marching Cavaliers, and concert band, gymnastics team, a powder puff player, Keyettes Club, regional band and a National Writing Contest participant.

"I thoroughly enjoy working with students on service projects to better the community. I would appreciate the opportunity to work with other high school students, city officials, and festival coordinators to help make this year's festival a success."

Special Dedication

In an effort to encourage area-wide support of the Eastern Virginia Medical School, R. G. Moore, owner of R. G. Moore Building Corp., donated a parcel of land in Wesleyan Pines and profits from a single family house that he will build on the lot. The total gift will be at least $50,000. Fund-raisers for the Eastern Virginia Medical Foundation joined Moore and Dr. William Mayer, EVMA president, at a recent ground breaking ceremony.

Officer Honored For DUI Enforcement

Virginia Beach Police Officer B.B. Batten recently received a plaque and a free dinner for two at Tandem's for his efforts in drunk driving law enforcement.

The presentation was made by Lillian DeVenny, vice president, Virginians Opposing Drunk Driving, headquartered in Norfolk with 12 chapters across the state. The organization was formerly known as MADD, Many Against Drunk Driving.

DeVenny said that in 1982 an anonymous donor set up a fund to show appreciation to police officers who were exceptional in drunk driving law enforcement.

In Virginia Beach, Batten is the first recipient. "It's nice for them to acknowledge the work we're doing out there," Batten said. Batten said he averages about 100 DUI arrests a year, and spends about 180 hours in the classroom receiving information about drunk driving law enforcement, and about the same number of hours teaching it.

Crime Solvers Looking For Robbers

Crime Solvers is seeking information about an armed robbery that occurred on July 11 at the Lynnhaven Convenience Center in Virginia Beach.

At 11:10 a.m. that day, a man entered First American Savings and Loan at 2738 Virginia Beach Boulevard and got in line behind another customer. When he got up to the counter, he was holding a small blue steel automatic handgun. He pulled a paper bag from under his shirt and demanded money from the teller. After getting the money, the robber left the savings and loan and was last seen running east-bound on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

The robber was black, in his mid 20's, 5'9" to 6' tall, and weighed about 150 pounds. He had long black, afro-style hair (which was possibly a wig) that covered his ears. At the time of the robbery, he wore a light blue fishing-type hat with a brim, a blue T-shirt with "GR" on the back, faded blue jeans, and white tennis shoes. He also had on black rim wire sunglasses and a white rag wrapped around his left hand.

Anyone with information about this or any other robbery is asked to contact Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers are eligible for cash rewards of up to $1,000, if their information leads to an arrest.

The Crime Solvers program pays cash for information about any crime, wanted person, or for information leading to the recovery of drugs or stolen property. Callers are never asked to give their names when they call.

When one has finally acquired a home like this, in a neighborhood like this, one has no more problems. Right?

Wrong! Economic problems may be fewer. Personal and family problems often become more complex. Some mighty unhappy people live on Easy Street.

There's nothing wrong with wanting to get ahead. Initiative, ambition, perseverance are endowments God wants us to develop. But material goals must not crowd out spiritual aims. In trying to gain everything one can become nothing.

Jodi Sirine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sirine of Virginia Beach, recently attended a new on-campus computer program at The Clarke School for the Deaf in Northampton, Massachusetts.

Jodi, along with 12 other students, spent an intensive two weeks becoming acquainted with computers and micro language on Apple microcomputers.

The opportunity to participate in a program of this type brings with it many advantages, according to Dr. Bill Blevins, Director of Summer Programs. "The handicap of deafness should not preclude the computer field as a highly desirable area of employment for deaf people," he said. "Early exposure to computers should motivate deaf youngsters to use computers as a modern way of learning and to consider the computer field as a future vocation."

Rockerfellow Winner

Andy Rockerfellow, a shy, 13-year-old Virginia Beach resident and four-year competitor in Soap Box Derby competition, walked away from the recent Mount Trashmore event a winner with help from the Naval Air Rework Facility, Norfolk.

Rockerfellow and his "NARE car" took top honors in the senior division race and will soon head for Akron, Ohio where he and hundreds of others will vie for national championship honors August 13.

The teenager was one of the last "unsponsored" drivers for this year's competition. NARE stepped in to sponsor him as they have sponsored entrants in the past.

Now that the first phase of the racing competition is over, Andy must fine tune his racer under the sequestered supervision of race officials. Commenting on this year's competition, Andy stated "There were 18 racers in all, eight in my division (senior). Now I have some adjustments to make. The NARE car is in good shape—just hope I do well in Akron."

Crime
Wanted

In 1982, the Virginia Beach Police Department investigated 1,841 hit and run vehicle accidents in which 36 people were injured and resulted in $627,936 in property damage. Already this year, 923 hit and runs have been reported.

As this week's Crime Solvers "Crime of the Week" the program is asking for information concerning a June 18, 1983 hit and run accident where a 20 year old Navy man was severely injured.

On that Saturday, at approximately 1:30 a.m., the man was walking west bound, in the grass next to the road, in the 3200 block of Virginia Beach Blvd. near Hall Pontiac. A witness saw a late model, dark blue or black Ford Fairmont or similar type vehicle knock the victim into the air and onto the feeder road. The driver of the car slowed down, but left continuing west bound without stopping.

The witness said the first letter in the license plate was a "P" and the second possible an "S". There would be damage to the right front fender or bumper of the car. The driver of the suspect car had long blonde hair.

Crime Solvers asks that anyone with information about this or any other hit and run accident call 427-0000 and, if an arrest is made, you will be eligible for up to a $1000 cash reward. Rewards are also paid for information about the location of stolen property, wanted persons or about any crime committed in Virginia Beach.

Callers never have to give their name or testify in court.

A Knock For Doyle

When opportunity knocks, Air Traffic Controller Second Class (AC2) Sally Doyle is there to answer.

The opportunity the Virginia Beach native is speaking about, was taking the time to prepare herself for the station Sailor of the Quarter interview that was held recently. All that preparation paid off—AC2 Doyle was selected as the NAS Oceana Sailor of the Quarter.

Petty Officer Doyle, an administrative assistant for the air traffic control division at Air Operations, was nominated by ACCS Thomas Havens, Leading Chief Petty Officer for Air Operations. Sally knew she would be an entrant for the station's quarterly award because she was selected as her department's Sailor of the Month and Sailor of the Quarter, respectively.

"The interview was scary at first. But after you answer a few questions and feel sure about yourself, things run smoother," said Doyle. Sally went home after the interview and was notified shortly thereafter of her selection. She called her mom right away to share the good news.

The 28-year-old Navywoman claims that most of her motivation to keep a high standard of professionalism and feel good about herself can be credited to her physical fitness program. In the last year, Sally has clocked up over 900 miles in the station Run For

Your Life program. "I've lost 13 pounds to prove it," she said with a smile.

Petty Officer Doyle compiles air activity reports, types basic correspondence, counts the daily air traffic, does clerical and administrative duties, and schedules annual physicals for personnel attached to Air Operations. She believes, "People can't miss with the Navy. It has so much to offer—medical benefits, good pay, schooling, and so much more," said Doyle.

To advance her goals, Doyle is presently attending courses at Saint Leo College through the command's Education Service Office. She has six months left until she receives her bachelor's degree in liberal arts.

"The support of my family and fiancé have helped me in making career decisions," said the five-year Navy veteran.

As Sailor of the Quarter, Doyle received a plaque and a Letter of Appreciation from Captain C.L. Tinker, NAS Oceana Commanding Officer. She also received a $50 Savings Bond from F&M Bank, two complimentary tickets to Busch Gardens, a steak dinner for two at the Seahorse Club, and a special luncheon with Captain Tinker at the Enlisted Dining Facility.

This sailor of the quarter's motto for success in the Navy is, "Do your best from the beginning and if you do, you won't lose in the end."

Grasping For Straws

Farmers May Go Back To Produce Farming

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

It may just turn out to be an overnight trend. Or it could mark a distinct change in Virginia Beach residents' eating habits. But now, for the first time since the 1950's, the Virginia Beach agricultural community is considering digging back into the produce business.

"Grain farmers have had economic stress for four years," said Dick Cockrell, director, Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture. "They are grasping for any straw to keep them even."

Virginia Beach stopped producing an abundance of fruits and vegetables in the mid '50's when migrant laborers began skirting Virginia Beach in lieu of other markets, and when commercial and residential development accelerated in the northern Lynnhaven and Bayside boroughs.

"Most of the vegetable crops were grown on the sandy soil up in the northern part of the city," said Greg Lonergan, Virginia Beach extension agent and horticulturist. "That's one reason why the vegetable production has gone down." In addition, produce prices didn't rise to meet the costs of machinery and labor.

"It got to be more economical to switch over to your row crops, like corn, wheat, soybeans, because the machinery could pass the labor. The technology to pick the vegetables was way behind."

Jim Belote, Virginia Beach extension agent and agronomist, said most of Virginia Beach's produce farmers got out of the business or cut back significantly because of strict regulations over the caring for and housing of migrant workers who for a while were used in Virginia Beach.

Whereas fresh fruits and vegetables used to be only picked by hand for commercial use, now

Store Bought Produce Looks 'Pitiful, Not Edible' To Baum

John A. Baum, a veteran Virginia Beach city councilman and 30-year farmer, doesn't see how people eat the produce sold in supermarkets.

"It looks pitiful and not edible to me," he said from his Blackwater home. "It's rather tasteless."

Certainly hothouse tomatoes don't taste as good as home grown, but in Virginia Beach there are not enough farmers growing produce to prevent local market chains and even the city owned Farmer's Market from buying produce from out of state.

But as increased attention to personal health continues, and more farmers feel the need to diversify their crops and supplement their income, a growing consumer demand for locally grown produce could develop.

"The potential is there," Baum said. "If the public wants fresh produce the trend can continue. I hope it does."

Farmers need "some assurance," Baum said that there would be a public demand for locally produced fruits and vegetables. A push from local agriculture officials could hasten the prospect.

He said local farmers need to be convinced that "the market is really there. Then there might be a shift."

Farmer Shortage At Market

Ray Hutton isn't a farmer. He's the superintendent of the city's Farmer's market on Landstown Road across from Princess Anne Park. But if he was a farmer he'd raise some produce.

"If I was a farmer I would give it a shot," he said. "It's like having a part-time job."

Flash Catching

The Ashley Wippett Invitational K-9 Frisbee Catch and Fetch Contest, sponsored by Cycle dog food, was recently held at the Red Wing municipal park.

The one-day event featured 20 dogs who were judged on teamwork with their owners and leaping ability.

"Flash," pictured above, is a two and one-half year old mixed breed owned by Virginia Beach resident Ronald Roller, who is in the Navy. Roller said "Flash" began catching frisbees at four months of age. They placed fourth in the contest, which was their first competition.

Ring Wars

Bobby Acey Planning To Write Another Chapter

By Greg Goldfarb
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

"When I first started fighting they brought Sugar Ray Leonard down here to fight an exhibition," remembers Bobby Acey, the Virginia Beach boxer who retired from the ring in Nov., 1979 with a pro boxing record of 18-2-18. He was a 147 lbs. state welterweight champ and ranked 12th in the nation by Ring magazine.

Acey no longer fights, age and broken hands set in, but he is still active in boxing circles as a trainer, manager and now, possible promoter. A former restaurant owner and now a student preparing for law school, Acey, 32, had scheduled the Dome for a pro card to be held on June 3. On June 1, however, the Dome was closed temporarily to repair asbestos leakage.

Acey said he and his partner for the canceled first card, Ed Sweeney, have not decided for sure if they will try for another night of fights. But Acey is confident that he can bring in boxing shows which may be popular enough to attract television coverage.

"The only way boxing is going to make it around here is, you're going to have to do like they did with the tennis matches," Acey said. "Bring a big name in. They'll sell it out. Bring in like a Boom Boom Mancini or somebody like that. They'll come."

In addition to Mancini, Acey also mentions names like Cooney, Chez. He says he may use Pavilion, or he may try to rent Met Park for an outdoor event. Before he can do anything he must research the costs of each of the possible locations, and the overhead including licenses, insurance and fighters' fees. It'll cost at least $25,000 Acey estimates to produce what he has in mind.

"We're trying to put together some investors," Acey said. "I'm thinking big. I'm not thinking just Rogue's Gallery." Rogue's has been the scene of recent nights of professional boxing which have regularly attracted good crowds.

Acey said the calibre of pro boxing recently has been superceded by the excitement.

"They weren't perfection boxing matches, or classic boxers out there showing their tools of the trade," Acey said. "But they were wars, with two guys going at it throwing each other around the ring. People walked out there and had a good time."

Acey said there is an abundance of Virginia Beach and area boxing talent available and if local promoters and trainers don't react, the better boxers will move to other cities.

Students in all Virginia Beach public schools are able to participate in the best book rental and instructional fee plan; a single payment at the beginning of the school year covers books and instructional materials. Participation in the plan is optional; that is, student not wishing to take part in the rental and fee plan may purchase all texts and will pay applicable in-

City Sticking To Local Gun Law, For Now

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

The State Attorney General's opinion notwithstanding, Virginia Beach City Council will keep its gun permit ordinance for the time being.

After all, what Attorney General's opinion on the city's gun permit ordinance amounts to is merely an opinion, remarked Councilman John A. Baum Monday evening. "Other localities with ordinances are not panicking, why should we panic?" asked Baum Monday evening.

In answer to a request for an opinion from the Rev. John D. Stallings of Virginia Beach, Baliles ruled that the city's ordinance was not legal because only the State has the authority to legislate gun control. Council has asked City Attorney Dale Binson to study the ramifications of the opinion, but Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. moved for repeal of the permit Monday night.

Councilwoman Reba McClannan made a substitute motion to defer action until Council received further information from the city attorney.

Jennings said he had inquired about the Status of the city attorney's report last week and the week before and each time it was the same thing - wait. He said the Attorney General's opinion was issued June 26 or 27 and

Ready, Set, Grow

The farmers are ready to grow fresh produce for local consumers if the consumers are ready to eat more fruits and vegetables.

That's currently a question being quietly battled around in local agriculture circles these days. Even supermarket chain produce managers say they would buy more produce off-the-truck if the farmers would bring their goods to them.

In Virginia Beach, the Virginia Beach Farmer's Market is famous for its selection of fresh produce, meats and even seafood. Much of the produce sold there is grown locally, but certain items such as grapes or plums are imported from other states. California, South Carolina and Maryland, as well as several other states also impact the local produce market.

There is now room at The Farmer's Market for about another 25 trucks from which farmers could sell their produce, but there aren't enough farmers. The farmers are cautious because they don't want to invest in a risky market without an overriding demand from the public for the products.

All that can be done now is eat well, stay healthy and visit the Farmer's Market. And when in the grocery store, tell the produce manager that you prefer produce that is grown locally.

Get Back

Sandbridge homeowners who were recently told to move their house as protection against the eternal sea must be frustrated, to say the least.

The city's Wetlands Board said bulkheading is not the solution to shore erosion. The board may be right, but bulkheading couldn't hurt either.

Environmentally, bulkheading might be damaging. But to tell eight homeowners to uproot their houses and move them back from the seaside sounds like it's asking a bit much. The homeowner doesn't want to lose his home. So he'll move before it washes away. But he can't sell it because any potential buyer would realize the erosion situation and not buy it unless there were some sort of protection safeguards in the water. So in order for the current owners to sell their houses they will either have to move them, win their fight with the Wetlands Board, or sink.

Police Unite

It's no secret that Virginia Beach police officers would like better working conditions and more pay. There's not much they can do to make the pressures of their jobs any easier, but they are uniting to financially protect themselves in the future.

Local 525, a branch of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, hopes to sign up 225 of Virginia Beach's 300 eligible patrol officers and detectives in the next several months. One of the union's organizers said the main reason the officers wanted a union is the fact that the department is getting older and the men and women are looking to the future. This means the officers must like Virginia Beach and want to retire in this city.

Who can blame them for that?

Facelift

Rest assured, Atlantic Avenue will get a facelift. But how it will be paid for is another story.

The hotel and restaurant owners on the resort strip want the costs, or taxes, spread city wide, arguing that tourism helps keep the city tax rates low. Others feel that those who feel the benefits the most should pay the most.

Both are good arguments. This question will be settled in city council chambers, publicly and behind closed doors, and no doubt, someone will be angry.

Atlantic Avenue needs to take a couple of steps up, and if it doesn't hurt too much, taxpayers should be willing to pay a little.

Creative Corner Expands

All Virginia Beach lovers of creative writing should spread the word that The Virginia Beach Sun will continue its forum for creative writing, beginning in a few weeks.

This year, however, the word "student" will be dropped from the heading and the "Sun Creative Corner" will be open to any Virginia Beach resident.

All Virginia Beach residents are invited to submit a creative work, shorter items preferably, for possible publication in The Virginia Beach Sun. Be sure to include your name, address, and phone number, age and occupation.

Don't Let Others Think For Us

Editor:

In recent years the subtle and not so subtle influence of disruptions have found their ways into areas which we, hitherto, have fought above such attack.

The attempt to influence our thinking comes now even from our spiritual leaders whose words of guidance should be reserved for matters pertaining to our souls and our inner peace, not specific political choices. As an American Catholic (former political prisoner of the Nazi's 16 months incarceration) I wish to state my strong opposition to the "so called" Peace Movement led by the Conference of Catholic Bishops. I consider it a breach of faith for these men of God to use their considerable influence upon their parishioners in the matter of Nuclear Freeze and presume to speak for me and millions of American Catholics on this issue.

It is of special interest to me by the way, that recently our Holy Father instituted a special commission headed by San Francisco Archbishop John Quinn, to study the major problems of the U.S. Catholic Church. He, called "on the clergy to 'Deepen Their Religious Life.'" Pope John Paul II's action comes not at a moment too soon. I look to the clergy to uplift my spirit, not to invade the area which separates Church and State. I suggest they (the clergy) leave National Defense to those whose business it is to understand it. It is vital we Americans...do our own thinking and stop allowing others to do the thinking for us.

Jefferson Was Known For Wine

It is generally not a well known fact that among the many honorary titles bestowed upon Thomas Jefferson is "father of American wines." Jefferson attempted, during the eighteenth century, to produce fine table wines at Monticello. He was convinced that Virginia's climate and soil could produce something other than the Scuppernon grape. He met with limited success. Eventually, an outstanding American wine industry did evolve...in California.

Today, over two hundred years after Jefferson's experimentation, the Virginia wine industry is having a renaissance. From Woolwine to Farmville to Middleburg, the Virginia wine belt now includes 19 producing farm wineries and 112 vineyards, with more on the way. The state now ranks twelfth in the country in terms of wine production and Virginia wines have begun to win prizes in international competitions.

The best place to find out more about the Virginia wine industry is by writing the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services; Division of Markets at P.O. Box 1163, Richmond, Virginia 23209. For general information on wines and wine-making though, the place to go is the Virginia Beach Public Library. The city's five area libraries and bookmobile own books on the wines of individual countries such as France, Italy and Spain plus numerous titles discussing American and California wines. There are elegantly written essays on viticulture "On Wine" by Gerald Ascher is an excellent example, evaluations and analyses of California wines (here "Pride of the Wineries" and "The Connoisseurs' Handbook of California Wines" shine), and directories for travelers interested in touring wineries (a fine new guide is "Vineyards and Wineries of America"). There are books on wine tasting, wine atlases and the therapeutic uses of wine. Finally, the library can even help you grow your own grapes and make your own wine.

Whatever your needs, the library can help you uncover a world of information concerning wines and wine-making. Just ask any library staff member for help.

Skydiving Is A Thrill

When I was 20, or was it 21, I jumped out the door of an airplane. I know, big deal. It's altitude was about 3,000 feet. I was wearing a parachute.

Of the two other students with whom I jumped, I was the only one of the three which landed in the drop zone. This other fellow landed in the treetops about a half a mile away. The young lady, bless her heart, the plane had to make two passes before she would step onto the strut, also landed out of the drop zone and in a cow pasture.

By Greg Goldfarb

Without a doubt, throwing your life out the door of an airplane is the most sensational thing I've ever done. And I'll never do it again.

Following a few hours of preparation our group jumped about 15 or 30 minutes before sunset. The airfield was in Fredericksburg, and the Appalachian Mountains blazed in orange and purple as I descended.

"Get your feet together. Keep your knees together," shouted friends from below, as I floated to earth. I landed, nothing broken, and shook with excitement all the way back home.

It had been a good first jump. (I didn't realize it at the time but it was also my last jump).

As the pilot cut the engine and I stepped onto the wing of the plane to cast off, I remember having no fear at all. If I had doubts, I would never have entertained the idea to begin with.

I looked at the jumpmaster. He nodded. I let go.

"Please God let the shoot open," I prayed repeatedly. Soon, before the count of ten, I heard the sound of silk stretched tight with wind, and I knew that at least I wasn't going to die. (Had the shoot not opened, I had a reserve around my waist).

As soon as the chute opened the next thing for which I prayed was to land in the drop zone. If I hadn't, my memories of that occasion would not be positive.

The parachute was open, I was falling and remembered what the instructor had said about "holding and running." This is a procedure whereby you turn your body toward and then away from the wind, which gradually eases you down on the right slope so as to land in the proper landing area.

Everything went without a hitch. I hit the ground and rolled over my five or seven contact points from my ankle to my arms, and never missed a beat. I was elated.

Skydiving was certainly fun when I was young and stupid. But I don't know if I'd do it again now. In fact, now that I think about it, I don't know why I did it then. Nobody in their right mind would throw

Shakespeare Festival

700 Attend Openings

Approximately 700 people attended the opening nights of this year's Shakespeare-By-The-Sea festival sponsored by the city, held at the Pavilion theatre and directed by Henry deShields.

"As You Like It" opened Friday night to a crowd of about 400. On Saturday night "Measure for Measure" drew 300.

"As You Like It" received "rave reviews," according to deShields. He expects the same for "Measure."

Performance dates for "Measure," are August 24, 26 and 28 and Sept. 1 and 3. "As You Like It," August 25, 27, 31 and Sept. 2.

Farmers Diversify Crops

The premise here, barring inclement weather and disease, is to keep the land in cultivation as much as possible.

"You put in a crop of soybeans and when that particular crop is harvested and sold, you have nothing; you're living off the profit of that crop until you're ready for the next crop of soybeans."

The Farmer's Market has about 23 tenants in its circle of vendors, and spaces for 57 pickup trucks from which farmers sell their produce. The circle is always full, leased on a yearly basis for between $35 and $45 a month, but the parking spaces are usually less than 50% full.

Hutton favors farmers growing different crops and bringing them to the market to sell.

"I think it's a good idea," he said. "I would suggest to them that they put it on their pickup truck and offer it for sale themselves."

Growing produce, such as peaches, tomatoes, okra, melons, apples, beans, maypeas and leafy greens, is a bit more risky than growing row crops. Weather, disease, and pests can be a problem.

"But weatherwise," Hutton said, "if you get a frost when your peaches are budding, you're going to either lose your entire crop, you get a smaller peach or you need a longer growing time. But it'll hurt them."

Farmers could also use more income because of the higher cost of living.

"Maybe they've been able to live with it for a while," he said, "but now they're saying, 'gee, it's costing me more to live now. If I diversify my crop I'll have an annual income rather than a sporadic one.'"

Push For Vegetables

$10,000 machines can be purchased which can pick everything from tender leafy greens to cucumbers and potatoes. High schools kids and family members are usually the only hired hands needed. These factors have contributed to an increased interest by farmers to diversify their crops.

"There's a push to go back to vegetables now," Loneragan said.

Cockrell said he suspects farmers will be making "more intensive use of their land, but cautioned that produce farming may not be for everyone."

"If a man is inclined to enjoy vegetable production and has knowledge of it, then it can be an asset," he said. "But if he lacks either of these, I think the individual will be disappointed in vegetables."

But if a person is so inclined, more crops could mean more money, provided disease is controlled and the weather is good.

"I think the farmer must search for every new concept that is presented that can help this position," Cockrell said.

Of course there must be a consumer demand for the product produced, which Cockrell said should be presented to the public by a "fresher to the consumer" promotional marketing concept.

LCAP's - Fort Story

Jennings reported that he had received 18 telephone calls from citizens complaining about the noise from the recent exercises of the Army's air cushion landing vehicles (LCAP-30's) at Fort Story. He said he instructed the citizens to write to their Congressional representatives.

Hurricane

Recent destruction from the hurricane Alicia in Galveston, Tex. prompted Jennings to ask whether Virginia Beach had an evacuation plan. He suggested asking the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company to assist by printing an evacuation plan in phases in the telephone directory. He asked City Manager Thomas H. Muchlenbeck to investigate this innovative approach to an evacuation plan.

Bonds

Heischouer reported that he has asked for inclusion in the city's legislative proposals to the General Assembly authority to reissue bonds at a lower rate. The city Charter does not allow this.

Dumpsters

R. Jones requested continuation of the provision of dumpsters at schools or other locations throughout the warm months. The dumpster program ended Aug. 15 during the hottest part of the summer, he said. Muchlenbeck explained that with school opening, the dumpsters would have to be relocated behind the cafeterias. Also, Public Works Director Oral Lambert pointed out, there is a problem of mixing the dumpster traffic with school traffic. Jones suggested trying non-school hours.

Atlantic Avenue Beautification

Muchlenbeck was granted authority by consensus to place on the Sept. 6 agenda a request for $200,000 for preliminary engineering work on the project. Also presented were three funding alternatives for the three phases of the $28 million project.

Series Of Shows Starting

The Virginia Beach Recreation Center, Bow Creek, recently held its first arts and crafts show.

Lee Miner, assistant center director, said the center intends to hold a show on the first Saturday of each month. The first show featured 25 exhibitors, all of whom exhibited free. From here on out, however, exhibitors will pay $5 for a table and will be required to have a $10 facility use card which is good for one year.

The show was held in the center's lobby, and Miner said the facility will be able to accommodate 150 exhibitors.

The one-day show was a trial, but it "turned out real well," Miner said.

Barton At Convention

Hugh Barton, manager of the Virginia Beach Convention Bureau, was among the more than 400 participants in the recent International Association of Convention and Visitor Bureaus' 70th annual convention, held in Tampa, Florida.

This year's convention theme centered on the development of a closer working relationship among the various components of the convention and visitor industry. In addition to discussion sessions with representatives of other industry associations, Barton participated in sessions focusing on international marketing, public relations and effective bureau management.

Local Gun Law

"certainly 60 days is ample time to work this out." He said it has placed the city in an awkward position when the attorney general had issued an opinion that the ordinance is invalid or unconstitutional. He said it was a serious mistake to keep the ordinance on the books and that until a decision is made it should be repealed.

The problem surfaced when the Police Chief requested changes in the old gun permit ordinance. Citizens among them stallings, protested. Baum said the changes would have prohibited selling guns to underage persons and the insane and "I don't know why we would want them to have them anyway."

Council deferred action by a vote of 7-4 with Councilmen Harold Heischberger, Jennings and Dr. J. Henry McCoy and

Why Not A Career In Real Estate?

Many of the most successful people in real estate today have come from all walks of life: teaching, nursing, accounting, secretarial, homemakers. To be truly successful in real estate, one does not necessarily need to have an extensive background in sales or management.

The self-motivated, goal oriented person with a high energy level, when properly trained, produces a winning combination that can result in five figure earnings.

Chick-Fil-A Unit Celebrates Anniversary

One of the fastest growing retailers in Tidewater will mark its third anniversary August 18, 1983.

The Chick-Fil-A restaurant at Military Circle plans to celebrate the occasion by giving its customers a free desert with the purchase of a box dinner, until the end of August.

"We feel we are truly a part of the community", said Sam Doyle, operator of the Chick-Fil-A unit.

"The past year has proved that people like our products, as sales have risen by 20%," he continued. "Our staff has taken an active role in the community and we can tell by the conversations and return visits in the restaurant that we are most welcome here."

Doyle attributes the restaurant's success to very simple things - the quality, taste and freshness of the food and the quality of the employees. "If you carefully select all the food you serve and prepare it fresh, people will naturally like it and come back," he said. "The other key to success is that people want fast service at a fast food restaurant, and they prefer to get it from people who enjoy serving them. That's where the quality of our employees proves itself."

Doyle noted that over 80% of the Chick-Fil-A business comes from return customers, substantially proving his theory. "Not just here, but nationally, the challenge is to get people to taste our freshly made products," he said. "Once they do, the vast majority return."

Our upcoming celebration is our way of saying 'Thank You' to the customers who've made our restaurant here successful," he added.

In The Center Of Things

At the corner of Gilmer Road and George Washington Highway in Chesapeake is a small natural wood building with the appearance of an early American General Store. The sign on the roof reads, "Center Store," so named, according to owners Pete and Betty Bissette, because they are located close to the center of much of the Chesapeake and Portsmouth residential area.

Betty stated the name was chosen because they wanted "to be the work clothing center for everyone in the area when we first started, but now we carry designer jeans, shirts and blouses and an array of accessories."

A "low overhead" lets Pete and Betty operate a real money saver operation. "We try to turn our owners into dollar savers for our customers with prices they can easily afford," Pete said. "The Center Store has only been in operation for one year and customers are coming back time and time again, so we must be doing something right," he stated.

Betty credits much of their success to Mr. C.H. Barnes "my real boss here. Without his constant help and advice we never could have done as good as we have. He really knows the business and what he says is what we do, because his track record is worth following," said Pete Bissette.

In the "for what it's worth department," what the staff of this newspaper has found at Center Store is some real down home, country-folk tendin' the store (and selling their wares at prices we can afford). Try the country-store atmosphere of the Center Store the next time you need clothes for just about anyone in your family.

M.E. Floyd Earns CPS Designation

Margaret E. Floyd of Chesapeake, currently employed as Secretary to the Chief Engineer of the Norfolk and Portsmouth Belt Line Railroad Company in Norfolk, Virginia, is among 1,060 secretaries in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Jamaica, Malaysia, and South Africa who earned the Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) designation this year, according to the Institute for Certifying Secretaries, a department of Professional Secretaries International.

The CPS rating is achieved by passing a two-day, six part examination administered by the Institute and by fulfilling work and educational requirements. Since the CPS Examination was first given in 1951, 17,257 secretaries have earned the designation.

The recognized standard of measurement of secretarial proficiency, the CPS Examination is given annually in May in over 250 examination centers. It includes six parts: behavioral science, business, business law, economics and management, accounting, communication applications, and office administration and technology.

The 1983 exam was taken by 5,394 candidates, including 1,983 who took the exam for the first time.

For 1983, the eight states with the highest number of successful candidates were: Tennessee, 86; Texas, 73; Ohio, 61; Missouri, 56; Illinois, 51; California and Michigan, 47 each; and Virginia, 40.

The 1984 CPS Examination will be given Friday and Saturday, May 4 and 5. Complete information about work experience and educational requirements, fees and application procedures may be obtained by requesting a free copy of the publication, Capstone, from the Institute for Certifying Secretaries, 2440 Pershing Rd., Suite 8-10 Kansas City, MO 64108; telephone 816-474-5755.

How come in a world that operates largely by machine and computer there is so much PRESSURE on the individual?

Maybe the answer is that few individuals are as well adjusted as our machines, as soundly programmed as our computers. Human beings are always encountering the unexpected for which we are unprepared.

Religion in every age has helped men meet and overcome the pressures that beset them. The simple realization the God cares about us is the beginning of a new sense of our mission in the world. We are not alone. Life is partnership with Our Lord. His power empowers us. His peace calms our turmoil. There's much more to successful living than enduring pressure. Discover that in regular worship.

Money Offered For Motorcycle Theft Info

The Virginia Beach Crime Solvers program is offering cash rewards of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of the persons responsible for several motorcycle thefts in Virginia Beach.

Since June of 1982, 18 Harley-Davidson motorcycles valued at $104,000 have been stolen from parking lots, garages, and driveways from various sections of Virginia Beach. Most of the time, the motorcycles were locked and thieves had to lift the bikes and put them in another vehicle to steal them. No pattern of time, day, or location has been established.

Police investigators believe many of the thefts have been committed by the same group of people who are stripping the bikes and selling the parts. Norfolk and Portsmouth Police Departments are experiencing the same problem.

Crime Solvers asks that anyone who has information about any of these motorcycle thefts or the location of the parts, to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Cash rewards up to $1,000 are also paid for information about any stolen property, wanted persons, illegal drugs or any crime committed in Virginia Beach.

Callers never have to give their name when giving information or to collect the rewards.

Do It Yourself Jamestown Tour

JAMESTOWN, Va. — America's first settlement here at Jamestown. A series of anodized aluminum signs now provides a self-guided tour of the Jamestown National Historic Site.

"There are numerous monuments, markers, and plaques around the site," R. Angus Murdock, executive director of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities (APVA), said. "But there was no consistent group of signs that enabled our 600,000 visitors each year to make an orderly tour of the site."

"That's why we developed this new set of

The Anatomy Of An Investor

Courtesy Of
Gary D. Bennett
Wheat, First Securities

"Before we can decide who should be an investor, we should understand what an investor is. The act of investing is defined as putting money to use, by purchase or expenditure, in something offering profitable returns. Therefore, an investor is the individual, business, or institution that puts their money to use."

The succeeding question is obviously, "How much money does it require?" By definition, the act is important -- not the amount. An individual with a small amount of money is an investor as certainly as a Mutual Fund manager is an investor. Investors come in all "shapes", "sizes", and amounts.

in the stock market have been attributed to institutional investors moving large sums of money in and out of the market. A recent study has concluded that for the past five years institutions have been the prime movers of the market. The same study concludes that for the next ten years individuals will be the prime movers. It is hard to imagine that one individual buying one hundred shares, in a market that trades one hundred million shares, can affect the market. Think of the effect of one thousand such investors.

The last part of the anatomy is the purpose. The key phrase is "something offering profitable returns". An investor puts money to use in something that, based on sound facts and reasonable expectations, has potential for profitable returns. A speculator puts money in something that, due to the associated risk, has some potential for high return. An investor may purchase high rated, well backed bonds; while a speculator may purchase low rated, poorly supported bonds.

In many ways, putting money in a money market is making an investment. The bottom line is making your money work for you--since you have already worked for it. Given this, are we all investors of one kind or another? If not, should you not at least consider it?

Road Blocks To Financial Security

This week we are going to take a look at the road blocks that cause so many of us to fail financially, even with all good intentions and plans for the future. This list is not to be all inclusive but certainly will include ones that most frequently have the greatest impact on all of us.

LACK OF DISCIPLINE. Unfortunately we have become a nation which tends to spend first and save the balance. Too many times the balance is zero. The United States ranks behind such countries as Germany, France, Japan, and even a socialistic country like Sweden; when we compare the nations rate of savings as a percentage of disposable income. We, as a nation, apparently have lost the discipline to save over a long period of time.

SAVING TO SPEND RATHER THAN INVEST. This road block follows very closely to the Lack of Discipline. With the national debt over one trillion dollars and personal debt over four trillion dollars it is easy to see that whatever savings we tend to accumulate, unfortunately, spent rather than invested. Remember, it is not how much money you have earned over your lifetime, but rather how much you have accumulated at the end.

BAD INVESTMENTS. Bad investments can cause the outright loss of money accumulated. Therefore, make sure that you fully understand the investments you make. Wealthy people can afford to lose some of their capital, and thereby, are willing to assume greater risks. For most of us, this is not a prudent course of action.

There are at least two reasons: First, money we wish to invest has been accumulated over a long period of time, and we simply can not afford to lose it; secondly, losses are extremely difficult to overcome. Therefore, a prudent strategy may be to invest first for safety and return second. A general rule to remember is: When investing, "the greater the rate of return offered, the greater the risk of loss."

INFLATION. High rates of inflation appear to be here to stay. In the short run, we hope that our earnings will keep pace with inflation. However, investing for the future creates a different kind of problem. We try to make investments that have a reasonable chance in providing a hedge against inflation. Long term projections are not only hazardous but very difficult to make. Trying to determine trends of interest rates, equity markets, and the like, even in the hands of professional money managers, are at best, educated guesses.

INCOME TAX. Inflation has been said to be the cruellest tax of all, however, income taxes also strip us of our ability to accumulate wealth. While it is usually not possible to totally avoid income taxes, there are ways to postpone taxes. More on tax deferral of income in later articles.

DISABILITY. According to recent studies, if you are between the ages of 35 and 65, there is a 50% chance that you will be disabled for at least 90 days prior to attaining age 65. This staggering statistic makes it apparently clear that many well devised plans have failed simple because proper precautions were not taken to insure oneself against serious disability.

Almost half of all mortgage foreclosures are caused as a result of homeowners being disabled. The question we might ask ourselves is "if I were sick or hurt tomorrow and could not go to work, how long could I live on my savings?" Until we have had a chance to build a substantial amount of capital the only practical way to protect oneself against a prolonged disability is to have adequate disability insurance. We will take a look at this item, in greater detail, in later articles.

Remember, planning is not a one time, one shot deal. It is a continued reviewing, revising, and updating of goals and objectives that have been set in the past that are currently being considered and hopefully will be achieved in the future. As one noted author said, "In his wisdom God gave to each of us a limited, finite number of hours a year to achieve our goals, both material and spiritual. He gives the same amount to the rich and to the poor, to the young and to the old. Whatever success we may achieve in this life will come from the purpose to which we put God's priceless gift - TIME."

By Herbert L. Perlin, Perlin Financial Services

My advice to you is to start planning for your financial security - NOW. Stay healthy, see you next week.

Bowen Appointed State Adjutant

Robert L. Bowen, a retired Marine Corps Public Affairs Specialist, has been appointed State Adjutant of The American Legion in Virginia. The appointment was made by State Commander James F. Draper of Newport News and confirmed by the organization's Executive Committee in Richmond, August 6.

Bowen, the son of Mrs. Mary Ella Bowen of Norfolk, enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1960 and was commissioned in 1972. He retired as a Captain in 1980 while assigned to the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs in the Pentagon.

Following retirement, Bowen held temporary public affairs appointments with the U.S. State Department's Cuban-Haitian Task Force and with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. He also served on the Public Relations Staff of The American Legion's National Organization in Washington, D.C.

"The American Legion, a veterans' service organization with outreach programs aimed at the youth of the nation, was founded nationally and in Virginia in 1919. In accepting the appointment, Bowen became the 11th Legionnaire to hold the State Adjutant's office."

Bowen's 20 year military career included four tours in Vietnam as a Combat Correspondent for Leatherneck Magazine and the First Marine Division. Photographs taken by him in Vietnam earned him the runner-up, Military Photographer of the Year Award in 1967. He also served on the staff of the Defense Information School in Indianapolis, and managed a military radio and television station in Japan.

The State Adjutant is primarily concerned with the administrative function of the organization including internal communication with the 35,000 Legionnaires in Virginia. Nationally, The American Legion has 2.8 million members.

Bowen has held numerous offices in his American Legion Post in Woodbridge, Virginia, including Commander. He and his wife, Helen, intend to move closer to the State Capital and the State's Legion Headquarters.

The 1983 figure includes approximately $2,012,000 ($1.30 a share) primarily

More DUI Arrests

By PAUL J. LANTEIGNE

This month's Traffic Safety Summary shows a continued trend of increased drunk driving arrests. "Year To Date" totals indicate a 52 percent increase for 1983 over 1982.

Alcohol related accidents have decreased 11 percent year to date despite an increase in our city's population and related vehicle registration.

The bad news is that traffic deaths are well above last year's "Year To Date" totals. As of the end of July, six more people died on our city streets than did last year at the same point in time. It is, however, important to remember that in 1982 our city had the lowest traffic death total in recent memory.

Operation R.A.I.D. is obviously gaining in public support. During July our department received 303 reports of drunk drivers from concerned citizens. That number is likely to increase substantially in the fall when an increased public information campaign is due to begin.

'I'm Paid To Be Upset'

"We've been involved, kicking, screaming, shoving, pushing trying to educate" - Chapman

By Greg Goldfarb

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

"There are certain aspects of the school system that are phenomenal: it's a really good system," said James Benjamin Chapman, IV, executive director of the 1,900-member Virginia Beach Education Association. "Other areas of the school system I think need a tremendous amount of improvement."

Chapman, 38, is a professional troubleshooter. A "hired gun." The champion of teachers' rights.

"I'm paid to be upset," he jokes. But his job is no joke. Education is serious business, and no where is it taken more to heart, according to Chapman, than in Virginia Beach.

"One of the major impacts of my life was to see the opportunities I had, and what I was able to accomplish as a teacher," the former five-year Kemps Landing Elementary School science teacher said. "And then to hear the stories of some other situations, I didn't believe they were the same school system. And from that I became an advocate."

An advocate of teacher's rights, as well as for school nurses, nurses' aides, and psychologists, is the role the VBEA plays in Virginia Beach. Membership in the organization, which last year totaled 2,200, runs about $197 a year. The dues not only support the local education association, but also the 43,000-member Virginia Education Association, and the 1.7 million-member National Education Association.

Chapman, who spent four years in the Navy as an avionics technician and has a master's degree in elementary education with a history concentration, said much of the recent criticism of public education has partially come about because of the teacher's determination to call attention to shortcomings in the nation's public school program.

"There's a credibility gap, and I submit that a lot of that took place because teachers organized, worked together to bring out some of the realities that were taking place in public education," Chapman said. "So we can ultimately, maybe be charged with being part of this dilemma that we're in now."

"We've brought some things to light about salaries, and about fairness and about programs and curriculum," Chapman continued.

Years ago education associations did little more than plan spring picnics, dinners, and teas. Nowadays, however, the number of single working women in the work force and strains on the personal pocketbook have caused teachers to unite in order to survive in their chosen profession.

"With all these things coming out, and when the press suddenly say they have someone to talk to, they would write the story about the teachers being upset over salaries," Chapman said. "Obviously not only teachers read that newspaper, but parents and high school students read that paper, and said, 'oh my gosh, the teachers aren't getting paid enough,' and that starts them saying, 'well, I guess I really don't want to be a teacher, do I?'"

In the past the local education association was dominated by principals and administrators, but a revolution, of sorts, took place within the organiza-

The VBEA Is A 'reality,' Says Beach School Official

"It's fun to watch different administrators deal with me," said Jamie Chapman, executive director, Virginia Beach Education Association. "Those that are very confident in their jobs are very comfortable talking with me. And those who aren't don't know whether they're supposed to be seen talking to me or not. That's always funny to have happen."

Joe Lowenthal, spokesman for the Virginia Beach City Public Schools, said he firmly believes that people should have an organization or association to which to belong. And because of the existence of organizations, the school system deals with them.

"It's a reality and you deal with the reality they're here," Lowenthal said. "It's been around ever since I can remember. I was a member of it in 1955."

"From the teachers standpoint, it is probably good for them to have an association," Lowenthal continued. "From the school's standpoint, the school system will deal with any organization that exists. Certainly if I can help them in any way I do, and they help me anyway I can. I don't have anything against them."

He added, "I don't think anyone considers the VBEA a mosquito that's bothering an elephant. Not in any way. Certainly it's an organization, and this is the only way I know how to say it, it's an organization that exists."

Beach Student Spends Summer In Israel

When Robin Jaffee, a high school student from Virginia Beach, decided to spend the summer in Israel on the High School in Israel program, she thought she was in for a pleasant time without much effort.

"I expected to meet some nice kids and have fun. I didn't think there was a lot of study involved," she said.

Instead, Robin found herself spending an intensive five hours - at least - a day studying Jewish history, a further few hours doing homework and thriving on the whole experience.

"The work is so enjoyable," she said in Israel recently.

Teaching

Jamie Chapman misses teaching. But it's a sacrifice he makes in order to help the other teachers out there in the field.

Chapman had been a teacher for five years before resigning to take over management duties for the Virginia Beach Education Association. But even if Chapman hadn't been a teacher, one gets the feeling that his sensitivity and intuition on educational issues would have ultimately manifested, no matter what profession he chose.

If Chapman had remained in the public school system, he, with his master's degree, may have become an administrator by now. He would probably have his doctorate by now also. But at a major turning point in his life, he chose to pursue a path which would take him on a journey in search of professional excellence in the teaching profession.

Chapman's heart tells him that most teachers are good at their work and are conscientious about it. But the daily strain of teaching, and the ensuing financial limitations, have caused many teachers to rethink their priorities.

Enter Chapman. He doesn't want to sit by and watch good, talented people enter other occupational fields in lieu of teaching. It is his intention to correct the problems in the public school system, not in terms of curriculum, programs, and concern, but more with employer/employee relationships which have a direct bearing on teacher behavior and performance.

Chapman believes Virginia Beach has a good school system. The school system knows that many things about which Chapman speaks have validity from the teachers' perspective. However, the school system has responsibilities to the city council, the taxpayer, and the law. All factors considered, the two parties have worked together well. It also seems that the school administration is listening more to the community and teachers, even if the ultimate decisions are made by only a handful of people.

Romance Novels Budding In Beach Libraries

Emerald green, violet, brown eyes flecked with gold, auburn tresses, arrogance, coyness, breathless desire, exotic settings, impossible separations, joyful reunions, true love, all of these elements are immediately recognized by the growing number of romance readers. Behind the romance, however, is a booming industry.

Virginia Beach has been buying and borrowing romance fiction at a continually increasing rate. Libraries are circulating large numbers of these titles and book stores are devoting more and more display space to the genre. B. Dalton's romance buyer is quoted as stating that the chain's sale of series romances increased 98% in 1982 over 1981, with romance as a whole increasing 46%. A book store owner in Florida reports that romance makes up 10% of the store's stock while accounting for 50% of sales. Once a genre seemingly dominated by Harlequins and Barbara Cartland, today four to six new titles per month are being issued by at least 10 imprints. In January 1983, six new imprints entered the market with five additional series expected by Fall.

In the face of this apparent phenomenon, one might ask just what is this thing called romance? They come in a variety of flavors, so to speak: romantic suspense/gothic, regency, contemporary, historical, category, and science fiction/fantasy. Each type has specific formula which are followed in writing the plot.

Romantic Suspense/Gothic: This variety is usually of medium length. The background of a romantic suspense title is contemporary, the plot full of action with a mystery involved intertwined with romance. A gothic contains elements of terror often implying the occult. The setting is eerie, often the northern coast of England. The best known writers in this area are Victoria Holt, Phillis Whitney, Mary Stewart, Isabelle Holland and Barbara Michaels.

Science Fiction/Fantasy: Of medium length, this type of romance deals with heroes from other worlds. It may be one of the types of romance to increase in popularity in the future. Authors in this category include Anne McCaffrey and Jean Auel.

Regencies: Regencies are witty and light and of short to medium length. They are set in the elegance of England of 1911-1820 and emphasize the repartee between the hero and heroine. The rules include the absence of sexuality, the inclusion of historical detail and literary style. The heroine remains pure until her wedding day. The best examples of this type of romance can be found in the works of Georgette Heyer, Clare Darcy and Joan Aiken.

Historical romances: These novels are medium to long in length and set in any period prior to World War I. Emphasis is on romance rather than history, despite the genre title, and must include such elements as accurate historical research, erotic sex scenes and a happy ending in most cases. This variety of romance has often been dubbed "bodice rippers." Authors include Jennifer Blake, Jude Deveraux, Roberta Gellis, Johanna Lindsey, Norah Lofts, Rosemary Rogers, Bertrice Small, Jennifer Wilde and Kathleen Woodiwiss.

Contemporary: These romances are medium length popular novels. They emphasize the woman's emotional experiences in a contemporary setting. The stress is on sentimentality. Characters tend to be modern and realistic. Authors include Danielle Steel, Patricia Matthews, Janet Dailey and Charlotte Vale Allen.

Category: Category romances are short and contemporary and represent the fastest growing part of the romance publishing industry. They follow a formula sometimes referred to as the "Cinderella legend." This formula, simply stated, is "female meets devastating man, sparks fly, lovers meld, lovers are torn apart, get back together, resolve their problems, and commit themselves, usually to marriage." These novels come in two lengths: short 192 page books and longer 256 page titles. Romance is of a sensual variety termed as "sex with commitment." Authors usually write under a pseudonym with some authors writing under several different names. The list of these authors include Janet Dailey, Charlotte Lamb, Violet Winspear, Flora Kidd, Anne Hampson, Stephanie James, and Roberta Leigh.

Although polls indicate that readers choose romance titles more by author than series, according to author Kakthyri Falk the following types are descriptive of the content of category romance series:

Steamy Spicy
Candlelight Ecstasy Harlequin Presents
Lovequest Secret Chance at Love

Water: A Simple Argument

Certainly many North Carolina residents, including lawmakers, have sat in church on Sunday morning and heard sermons on sharing, caring and compassion for others in need. One wonders, however, how many of them actually listen to the service.

Off The Record

By Greg Goldfarb

Simply put, Tarheels don't want their neighbors, Virginians, drinking water from Lake Canton. What on earth could be more selfish? Suppose food was all that issue, North Carolina had plenty of it within its boundaries, and Virginia families were hungry?

Would they not give food to the hungry? Will they not sell water to the thirsty?

In the first place, water is like air. The Almighty created the universal commodity for everyone. He didn't divvy it, or portion out certain amounts to each state or country and proclaim that no man shall drink from another man's water supply. He provided it in what he thought was an abundance, some areas others, to sustain all life forms.

Suppose North Carolina had plenty of air and we had none? Would they allow us to suffocate?

It's no one's fault that Virginia Beach will have depleted its water supply by the 1990's. It's just a fact of life. And if we don't receive water, in the most extreme sense, we will die. This may seem like an alarmist attitude, but isn't that actually the bottom line? Without water life perishes.

Certainly no one in North Carolina wants the blood of parched-throated Virginians on their lips. But without water doesn't life cease?

Maybe this argument is too philosophical, too purist, too naive. But to my humble wit, to deprive a region of water is like denying a person's right to live. So what if their lake goes down a few feet as water is extracted? So what if a pipeline may disrupt the beauty of a late afternoon fishing trip on the lake?

Will the fish not bit because there is a big pipe in the water? Is fishing more important than living?

The only valid argument, although again a selfish one, North Carolina has made over the water issue is one over supply and demand. They fear that if they sell us some of their water, other arid regions encircling their oasis will also attempt to avail themselves to their watering holes in the future, thus taking more water away from its own residents. Tarheel officials have a responsibility to provide for their own, but isn't there enough to share? And by the time their water supply dwindles, there should be new ways of purifying water, and new sources from which they

Water

Of course the issue over water is not as simple as the pain of hunger. But that's because it's 1983. This wouldn't have happened 100 years ago.

But today we have a myriad of government agencies at all levels who are now involved in the water dispute. Who knows how it will end? All that's certain is that Virginia will need water soon. Tarheels want to keep every drop of "their" water for the day when their natives will need it.

But maybe all this public rhetoric about "we don't know what the impact will be" is only a coverup public argument for some deeper, more political issue about which, none of us know nothing.

Sterile

The fact of the matter is, some of those athletic "beefcakes" running around in international athletic circles may as well be unics.

Even though the use of steroids will enhance muscle building and strength potential, the use of the drugs can harm a person's internal organs, such as your liver, and render a man sterile and impotent.

Maybe a gold medal is important to some people, but so is a family and personal health.

The question is, if steroids are that dangerous and they've been used as extensively as some sports experts suggest, why haven't more athletes keeled over in their tracks?

Nancy

Nancy:

We were very glad to see your article in the other newspaper. We'll discuss with you later why it wasn't in ours. Anyway, like we said in the "Off The Record" column a few weeks ago, don't take what's happened to you and Martina personally. You're just in cities that sometimes takes themselves just a little bit too seriously.

We're glad you two are here, and even happier that you care enough about the local community to write your side of the stories. That's great. Don't take nothing off nobody. If you think you've been wronged, and you feel that strongly about it, write. It's the best thing you can do.

Welcome to Virginia Beach.

may draw. But for now, we need it.
North Carolina doesn't want us to go thirsty, I guess, and they would probably help us get a permanent water source from anywhere else but North Carolina.

Water is a life supporting necessity. Human life cannot continue without it. Who are Tarheels to play God and dictate who may drink from the well that was created to quench the needs of all people?

Suppose the situation was reversed. Suppose a locality wanted to draw water from a source in Virginia. Personally, I can't conceive of us not wanting to share a precious resource with others, even if it was in short supply, which it's not at Lake Gaston. I can't conceive of thinking rational beings being so greedy that they would sit back and croon, "let 'em drink dust."

of a vehicle exercise due care to avoid colliding with any pedestrian, and shall exercise proper precautions upon observing a pedestrian.

*No person shall drive a motor vehicle at a speed of more than twenty-five miles per hour on any highway designated as a "school" or "school crossing" zone.

School buses carry our most precious cargo. Most motorists recognize the bright yellow color and flashing red lights displayed by the bus as a sign of extreme caution. Some of the laws are outlined below:

*At intersections all vehicles are required to come to a complete stop when approaching a school bus from any direction, when that bus is loading or unloading children.

*On undivided highways or streets, all vehicles are required by law to stop and remain so, until all children are clear of the roadway and the bus is again in motion.

*On divided highways or streets, vehicles in all lanes travelling in the same direction as the bus must come to a complete stop, but vehicles travelling in the opposite direction and separated by either a physical barrier or an unpaired area may proceed without stopping.

In an effort to ensure maximum safety for all our children, the Virginia Beach Police Department will provide increased enforcement in all school zones. This enforcement will hopefully be unnecessary if we all use common sense and take extra care where our children are concerned.

tly, near the end of her two month stay. "That sounds stupid, but it's the kind of course that makes you think. You get into great discussions about things you never thought about before. At home, you learn history by looking at pictures in a book but here, it's like you're part of it."

"We travel around all over the country," she continued, "and learn about what happened at different sites. When we climbed Massada, for instance, it was as if we were the zealots making decisions about whether to take our own lives. You get a feeling for history that way."

Robin, together with a group of others from Virginia, is among the nearly 650 American teenagers from all across the U.S. who attend one of the five two month sessions held every year at HSI.

They receive full academic credits from their local high schools for the time spent at HSI, in keeping with the high academic standards the program maintains. The curriculum includes about 350 hours of instruction covering ancient to modern times, and is taught by highly experienced teachers with at least an MA degree or the equivalent. All teachers are former Americans now living in Israel.

Although most of the students come to the course with little relevant background knowledge (the course is open to all, and Christian as well as Jewish students attend), they make a generally excellent adjustment to the high academic demands, and usually, like Robin, thrive on it. Unusual teaching methods, such as learning about history at the place it happened and acting out historical drama tend to evoke an emotional as well as an intellectual response. To further involve students in Israeli life, students also meet people connected with Israel's past, and spend weekends in the homes of their Israeli contemporaries.

High School in Israel was founded 11 years ago by Morris A. Kipper, a reform rabbi in Miami, and gradually grew to encompass students from all over the country. Although there are a variety of programs for American teenagers visiting Israel, HSI is unique because it offers not just superficial tours, but an intensive study program which, research has shown, makes lasting impression on its students.

Crime Solvers

The Virginia Beach Crime Solvers' program is seeking information about an armed robbery that occurred on July 17, in the 500 block of General Booth Boulevard in Virginia Beach.

At 11:30 a.m. that Sunday morning, a bus driver for Tidewater Regional Transit (TRT) picked up a male passenger on 17th Street, who asked if the bus was going to Jungle Falls. After the driver said it was, the man got into the bus and sat down in the seat next to the door.

The robber was described as a black-male in his late 20's or early 30's, 5'7" tall, 170 pounds, with a short afro and mustache, spoke with a Southern accent and had acne. At the time of the robbery, he was wearing blue jeans, a dark blue button-up pull-over shirt, white Niki leather tennis shoes, and was carrying a light blue knapsack.

Anyone with information about this or any other robberies are asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers are eligible for cash rewards of up to $1,000 when arrests are made.

Crime Solvers pays cash for information about any crime, wanted person, or for information that leads to the recovery of drugs or stolen property. You never have to give your name to collect the rewards.

Continental Centralizing Records

Continental Telephone of Virginia is centralizing all 200,000 of its customer records. This means, starting August 25, customers in Princess Anne will call new toll free telephone numbers for service requests and billing questions, according to Dennis O'Hearn, superintendent - telephone services.

The new phone numbers are: residential service requests and service changes, 1 + 357-8822; business service (all requests) 1 + 357-8833; billing questions, 1 + 357-8811. The repair number remains the same.

"Our customers will still be able to buy telephones and transact all their telephone business at our Phone Fair on Princess Anne Road," said O'Hearn.

Three other Virginia Beach exchanges have started using the new service numbers: Pungo and Knotts Island on August 4; and Shipp's Corner on August 16.

Smithfield, Continental's eastern area headquarters, will be the computerized center for the area's 72,200 customer records. The eastern area covers: King George County, Westmoreland County, Richmond County, Northumberland County, Lancaster County, Middlesex County, Matthews County, Cloucester County, King and Queen County and Essex County; portions of Stafford County, Spotsylvania County, Orange County, Caroline County, Surry County, Isle of Wight County, Hanover County and King William County; portions of the City of Virginia Beach and portions of the City of Suffolk. This includes Bowling Green, Warsaw, Tappanhook, Chancellor, Smithfield, Surry, and Knotts Island, North Carolina.

The new computerized record keeping system is called DCRIS which stands for the Distributed Customer Record Information System. DCRIS will eventually computerize Continental's customers records statewide, as well as centralize and consolidate them and standardize procedures. "It will eliminate much of our costly time consuming paper work," said O'Hearn.

"DCRIS will be a great time saver. There are seven steps to process any customer service request. All of this was done manually before," said O'Hearn. "Now any employee working with DCRIS can find any single piece of information about a customer within 50 milliseconds."

Service representatives will use terminals at Princess Anne's Phone Fair to transmit service order data to Smithfield. "By typing in a few instructions, the service representative can have a visual display of all existing service and records for any customer in a matter of seconds. With DCRIS an employee can make all information change at one location and this updated information is immediately available to other system users," O'Hearn said.

"For example, let's say a late paying customer makes a cash payment in the Princess Anne Phone Fair. Our employee there would record this cash payment into the terminal," O'Hearn explained. "Immediately any user of this system in Smithfield can see that this transaction has been made. So we cut down on our work time, and in this case, the customer, is much less apt to be wrongly disconnected for non-payment."

The Smithfield office will eventually employ approximately 65 DCRIS employees, many of whom will transfer from other Continental Telephone locations.

Costs to renovate the Smithfield office for the computer center totaled $442,000. The computer equipment itself costs $386,000.

DCRIS service offices will be located in Dale City and Emporia as well as Smithfield. The main computer will be in the Occoquan central office building in Prince William County.

Father Frias

Plays Important Role

By FRED L. LINGAD

Special To The Sun

Rev. Father Santiago C. Frias, Director and Port Chaplain of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond Apostleship of the Seas, plays an important role in addressing the spiritual human needs of merchant seamen coming from all over the world to the Port of Norfolk.

Such a project is now on its second year of operation. Frias visits the seamen aboard the ships anchored in port, offering counseling on their individual problems as well as giving them the sacrament. The average number of visiting seamen is about 30 a week and these people are brought to Filipino families in the Tidewater area or to parties being held by Filipino groups.

The latest group was brought to the Philippine Bayanigan group headed by President Algia Alviar during the monthly social held at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center. Rides by these visiting groups are provided free by some volunteers, like Jesus Dizon and Felix Villanueva. Mrs. Huling Frias, wife of the president of the Pangasinan Association of Tidewater is also an active volunteer who arranges the activities. Funds for this project come from the Bishop of the Richmond Diocese and from voluntary contributions.

Greetings and Congratulations to: (following Filipinos) Tony Dizon for his promotion as Assistant General Manager of American National Insurance Co., and for recruiting five new reps.

Dr. Chito Camus for his appointment as Company Medical Examiner of American National Insurance Co. Dr. Renato H. Geolea, a surgeon, for acquiring a new and bigger clinic for his patients located in Chesapeake.

Dr. P. Miranda for a well-run and operated minor emergency and care center of Virginia Beach located at Kempsville and London Bridge.

Venus Tomaneng, R.N., for her appointment as Associate Director of Nursing, Lake Taylor Hospital. Alan Manglicmot for passing the Nautical Engineering Board.

Priscilla Asarias, R.N., for passing the 1st National Certification Examination, which makes her one of the pioneers of registered "Vascular Technologists" and works at Leigh Memorial Hospital.

Hermie Cachero for being elected as Mrs. Pangasinan 1983.

Soybeans Being Attacked!

By E.R. COCKRELL, JR.

Director of Agriculture

Virginia Beach farmers can expect higher levels of insects attacking soybeans this fall. Surveys taken in Tidewater fields showed increased levels of corn earworms in corn fields over a year ago. Corn provides the primary reservoir crop for the second generation.

Larvae detected to date are of many sizes and the moths that results will lay eggs over a long period of time. Corn earworm survival is somewhat dependent upon rain fall, generally dry weather increases survival and rainy conditions will have a counter influence.

Another factor that influences infestation levels is the growth of the soybeans. Moths like to lay their eggs in fields that have open canopies. Thus, late planted beans that have not had sufficient moisture to completely close in the rows will likely have increased activity. Because of these influencing factors we do expect a longer season of insect infestation on more acres. Many fields will of necessity have to have control measures applied more than once.

Control will be applied by aerial application of corn earworm control materials. The most desirable times of the day for application are early morning and late afternoon when wind speed is low.

Beach Jehovah Witnesses Announce Seminar

The Virginia Beach Congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses has announced its fall seminar which will be held at the Woodrow Wilson High School beginning at 9:55 Saturday, Sept. 17. The two-day sessions have been designed to show how to demonstrate the qualities of God's ministers. The program stresses information that needs personal application, requiring a self-sacrificing attitude that exalts our Grand Creator, Jehovah God and Jesus Christ. Martin Cowell of the North Virginia Beach congregation will address the baptismal candidates on the subject "Ordained as Ministers of the Kingdom." Candidates will dedicate their lives as ministers of the Kingdom as did Christ as shown by the Scriptures and history. All can view the baptism from the auditorium. Speaking Sunday is Earl

Jacobs also from the Beach North congregation on "United Fruit Bearers."

The highlight of the school will be the public address at 2 p.m. on Sunday, "What Future is There For You," by Louis R. Beda, district overseer. Beda oversees Witness Circuits in Virginia and North Carolina and since 1960 has served in missionary work in 15 states. Beda says "the future today is in grave jeopardy and in question. Indeed, can you fortell your future? None of us can, but God, who controls the future holds out a purposeful future for us." 1600 persons are expected from Chesapeake, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach. Area Kingdom Halls will be closed in order for all to attend this special "free to the public" seminar.

VBEA, Chapman

tion and things have never been the same since. "Through governance changes and the constitution, the association has been allowed to be taken over by classroom teacher," Chapman said. "When that change took place, then the organization started advocate for a lot of the priorities of what the vast majority of the members of the association had already been."

That split caused a rift between administrators and teachers, "because the administrators could no longer control the association," Chapman said.

It was at that point when the association began focusing very closely on the realities of public education.

"We've been involved with it, in one way or another, kicking, screaming, showing, pushing, trying to educate," Chapman said, "trying to get the commitment to do in our schools those things that needed to be done."

A Teacher First

Chapman, the son of a fruit farmer and water and sewer superintendent for a town in New York, attended all 12 grades in one school house. He was a good student, and played baseball, golf, and was a member of the student council and the glee club.

Singing "was my biggest joy in high school," Chapman recalls.

He graduated in 1967 from the State University of New York at Oswego, yet Chapman had very little in the way of career or guidance counseling in high school or college. In college he continued to sing in the glee club, and in a statesman group, which is a special double quartet. Before he graduated Chapman had a total of 36 different jobs, ranging from mowing lawns and driving heavy equipment to farming and driving snow ploughs.

Following a teaching job in Scottsdale, New York, Chapman was drafted and served four years in the Navy. He made the best of the service but did not want to reenlist.

"I felt I was pretty much wasting a lot of my time," he said. "I didn't see it as a career. All I wanted to do was get back to teaching."

Chapman's last 10-month stint in the Navy brought him to Virginia Beach, where on the first day after he was discharged he began teaching at Kemps Landing School. He taught sixth and seventh grade science for five years, during which time he became the science department head at the school and worked his way into the executive ranks of the VBEA. It was Chapman's principal at Kemps Landing, George Chandler who is now at the new Centerville Elementary School, who really encouraged Chapman to become involved in the organization.

After serving on VBEA committees, and as a faculty representative, Chapman was elected to its board of directors in 1975-'76, and served as associate director from 1977-'80. He was elected executive director in July, '81. By this time Chapman had received his master's degree, and was entertaining ideas of obtaining a doctorate, entering educational television, or going on the VBEA staff.

"I took the area I saw was the most exciting, and also what I thought I could make the most impact for a change," he said.

Although Chapman likes being the mouthpiece for the association, it does have drawbacks.

"I really miss teaching," he said. "There are parts of teaching that are really phenomenal."

Would he go back to teaching? "I don't see at this part in time that the public school system is where I want to go back to."

While most teachers in the city are teaching, Chapman addresses himself to a variety of topics a day, sparing the afternoon for meetings with teachers after school.

Chapman is concerned about the declining number of students going into teaching, and also by the disillusionment of teachers who, after receiving their first few paychecks, may have second thoughts about their profession.

"People want to do a good job and I think they'll continue to do so," Chapman said, "but they want to be treated so they really can do that and be proud about it in the whole scheme of things."

Chapman's wife's name is Sarah, originally from Norfolk. They have one son, J.B. Chapman, V, two and a half years old. They are expecting a baby in March, and live in the Windsor Oaks section of the city.

93 Exhibit At Festival

There were 93 exhibitors from six states at the 9th Annual Folk Arts Festival, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and held recently at Princess Anne Park.

In addition to crafts, there were special exhibits, concessions, entertainment, craft giveaways and a space for youth crafts.

Approximately 30,000 people attended, and sales totaled about $5,000.

Three silver tray awards and 20 merit ribbons were presented. The James Kenneth Cole Award for the most enthusiasm for the craft was awarded to Dean Helfer of West Virginia for crafting wooden boomerangs.

The Pioneer Award for the revival of a craft that has become relatively extinct by original production methods, was awarded to Doug Barron of Norfolk for American beadwork, leather and jewelry.

The Heritage Award for demonstration of a craft that depicts the authenticity with which the craft was originally produced, was awarded to Gordon and Janet Kendrick of Waverly, Virginia for 18th Century Domestic Crafts (wooden spoons, etc.).

All of the above were first time participants in the Folk Arts Festival this year.

Merit ribbons are presented to those whose aim is mainly to learn, teach and share the craft with the whole family, not for the purpose of selling at the show.

The nine Virginia Beach exhibitors awarded merit ribbons were: John Bushore, stained glass; Pearl Combs, quilting; C.W. Daugherty and J.M. Tucker, creative wood design originals; Pat Ensin, (theorem painting and folk art); Georgiann Groves, stained glass; Al and Gladys Haworth, willow furniture; Dave McNew, Appalachian dulcimers; Ed Morrison, woodcarver; and Karen Sullivan, batik.

Report Cards Issued Four Times A Year

Report cards for all Virginia Beach students will be issued four times during the 1983-84 school year. The reporting periods are the same, but there are slight differences of dates for the issuing of elementary and secondary report cards.

Formal reports of the scholastic performance of elementary students (grades one through seven) during the first nine weeks will be issued November 2, 1983, or given to parents at parent-teacher conference Oct. 31, or Nov. 1. Second period report cards will be issued January 26, 1984. Third period report cards will be issued March 26, 1984, or given to parents at parent-teacher conferences on March 23. The final report for elementary students will be distributed on the last day of school, June 7.

Reports for secondary students, grades seven through twelve, will be issued on November 4, 1983, and January 27 and March 30, 1984. The final report card will be mailed home to students on June 14, 1984. The grading periods for secondary students are three weeks longer this year, but parents will also receive a formal progress report at the midpoint of the first and third grading periods.

The Future Of Long Distance Telephone Companies

Courtesy of
C. Randolph Hudgins III
Wheat, First Securities, Inc.

A recent report issued by the Federal Communications Commission appears to have reduced the cost advantage of the discount long distance telephone companies such as MCI Communications. Currently approximately two million people use services such as MCI, Sprint and Allnet to cut long distance bills. Come January 1st American Telephone and Telegraph will enter open competition with the discounters. The important date is October 3rd when AT&T files its long distance rate requests for 1984. The discounters will decide at the point whether to raise rates or lower rates. It appears that the discounters will still be able to offer lower rates, but AT&T should be much more competitive than in the past. What effect has this had on the recent stock market price of MCI Communications? From a 1983 pre-split high of $28.375 a share MCI has tumbled to its current price of $16.00. MCI has been one of the great success stories of the past three years. It remains to be seen whether comp-

Transferred Employees Still Buying Homes

By ROGER PYLE

Despite the housing industry slump, 93.8 percent of those employees transferred by their companies last year bought homes in the new location, a national study reveals.

Equitable Relocation Management Corp., which conducted the study, expects the percentage to rise with the housing rebound in 1983. As part of the continuing study, the national relocation company surveyed 1,250 transferees assisted by the firm last year. The percentage of those buying homes in the new location was down from 99.1 percent in 1980, the peak year. But the figure was higher than might be anticipated given the severity of the housing recession, says C. William Hartge, Equitable Relocation president and chief executive officer.

Nationwide, the Employee Relocation Council, an industry trade group, estimates 300,000 employees were transferred by their companies in 1982. This indicates that transferees were a statistically significant percentage of the total home buying market last year, Hartge adds. "The willingness of companies to buy or arrange the purchase of transferred employees' homes, and to provide assistance in paying higher mortgage costs and cost of living adjustments, has been an important factor in their decision to buy homes in the new location," he believes. This is happening in Tidewater.

The equitable survey releases that almost half of those transferees buying homes in 1982 did so after a single visit to the new location. More than two-thirds did so after two home finding trips. Most—66.5 percent—were able to sell the old home before buying a new one.

Over the years, transferees have consistently reported that monthly payments and upkeep on homes have cost more than they thought it would in the new location. Last year 58.0 percent felt this way, while 38.6 percent reported the new home is costing "about what I thought it would." Only 2 percent are paying less than they expected. However, in terms of size, location and amenities, 54 percent believed their new homes are more desirable than those at the old location, 24.9 percent felt the features were "about the same," while 19.1 percent described their new homes as less desirable than the old.

"On balance, transferees appear to be reasonably satisfied with and in many cases, enthusiastic about the change. And they lose little time in making it," Hartge adds.

In 1982, 77.2 percent reported that finding a home in the new location required them to take off five or less working days from the job. And there was even less time lost in connection with selling the old home. One reason for the quick transition is that more companies are offering a home finding service to help transferees select a suitable home in a new location, the relocation company president adds. In 1982 71.8 percent of employees offered this service up from 64.7 percent in 1981 and 61.1 percent in 1980.

Beer and Barbecue Taste Good Year-round

Barbecue and beer have always been a natural combination for summer fun and outdoor picnics. But the flavor of both can be enjoyed throughout the year.

Everyone knows how good a hearty beer can taste with many foods. But the makers of Lowenbrau suggest you can have your beer and eat it too! Many people feel that beer tastes as good in food as it does with it. A robust tasting beer such as Lowenbrau can add a special flavor and tang to many American dishes.

Frankfurters steamed in beer and fish fried in beer batters are well-known examples of beer cookery; but beer can add that special zest to a variety of foods.

A beer-honey marinade for barbecued chicken and vegetables and a beer cornbread are three such examples. Beer breaks down the fibers of tough meat to make an instant marinade; and the bitter-sweet, tangy style of hops balances the sweetness of the honey for a zesty sauce.

A cornbread recipe calling for beer and green chiles adds lightness, moisture and spice to the meal.

While everyone can't barbecue outside all-year-round, today many people have indoor electric hibachis and year-round outdoor grills. And there's always the traditional oven where a good barbecue recipe can make indoors taste like outdoors.

So, whether you're having a picnic, a family homecoming, a tailgate party or before of after the big game, or just dinner with a few friends, remember the beer and the barbecue. The effervescence of the beer and the right choice of seasonal vegetables and fruits can bring your meal to its peak anytime of the year.

Marinated Chicken with Vegetable Kabobs
1 cup apricot preserve
3 tablespoons cornstarch

1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 bottle (12 ounces) Lowenbrau Special Beer
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon hot/pepper sauce
2 2-½ chickens, quartered
2 pounds seasonal vegetables (yellow squash, zucchini, tomatoes, red or green peppers, etc.)

Combine apricot preserve, cornstarch, prepared mustard, beer, onion powder, salt, thyme, garlic powder and hot pepper sauce. Stir until smooth and well blended. Place chicken pieces in large shallow pan. Pour marinade over and refrigerate for at least 3 hours, turning pieces occasionally. When ready to barbecue; remove chicken from marinade and grill for 30-45 minutes, turning and basting often. While chicken is cooking, cut up assorted vegetables. Place vegetable pieces on skewers and brush with marinade. Grill for approximately 6 minutes, turning and basting often.

Yield: 2-½ cups marinade, 6-8 servings.

Spicy Beer Cornbread

1 cup yellow cornmeal
1 cup all purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup Lowenbrau Special Beer
1 egg
¼ cup better, softened
¼ cup chopped green chiles
¼ cup chopped pimiento

Combine cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder, chili powder and salt. Add beer, egg and butter. Beat until smooth. Stir in green chiles and pimientos. Pour batter into a greased 8x8-inch pan. Bake in a 425°F. oven for 20-25 minutes.

Yield: 12 servings.

Virginia Beach Dodge $100

A legend that carries the nameplate of America's first domestic-built fuel-efficient front-wheel drive car carries a lot of responsibility. The Dodge Omni shoulders that load.

With more miles of front-wheel drive experience under its belt than any other American-built car, Omni takes you where most rear-wheel drive cars fear to tread.

And with its standard 1.7-liter four-cylinder engine and four-speed manual transaxle, Omni is rated at 32 EPA EST MPG: 50 estimated highway.

There are two Dodge Omni driving machines for you to choose from. The base Omni model has many new standard value features that challenge anything European or Japanese cars have to offer. Then there's Dodge Omni Custom, a driving machine that lives up to its name with custom standard features for added value.

Take your pick. Then take a Omni for a test drive.

Innovations including a turbo-charged diesel engine, an automatic transmission option on the four-wheel-drive Power Ram 50 models, and a redesigned front end with a more massive front bumper make Dodge Ram 50 a leader in the small pickup market.

Ram 50 features a large cargo area, exceptional payload ability, and impressive in-cab storage on a 109.4-inch wheelbase.

Ram 50 is offered in four models, the new base economy model and Ram 50 Custom, both with a payload of 1,503 pounds; the Ram 50 Royal with a payload of 1,856 pounds, and the Ram 50 sport with a payload of 1,534 pounds.

Over Base Invoice Sale

Virginia Beach Dodge is getting ready for the 84's and is having a big $100 over base invoice sale. Now is the time to save hundreds on D-50 Pick-ups, D-150 Pickups, Dodge Omni, Dodge Aries, Dodge 400 and Dodge 600. All at just $100 over base invoice. Now's the time to Buy and Save!

Dodge Aries is a proven automotive success that has earned the right to be called "American's Family Driving Machine." With its advanced front-wheel drive technology and roomy six-passenger comfort, Aries is the right car for the American road and the times.

The Aries offers improved performance from the standard 2.2-liter overhead cam engine, a new heater system for improved air distribution, new bright metal accents to further enhance its distinctive styling, a new maintenance-free battery, and more.

Above all, Chrysler Corporation feels so confident about Aries' quality that upon expiration of the normal 12-month/12,000 mile new vehicle limited warranty, limited warranty coverage is extended on power train components, including engine, transaxle, and axle - plus outer panel rust-through protection - to five years/50,000 miles, whichever comes first.

Aries is a car designed to be driven - enjoyably.
